Japanese graphics on view

The Carmel Foundation invites its members and their friends to view an exhibit of Japanese Graphics. Works by outstanding print-makers are represented in the show at Town House which will run through the end of May. Among the artists are Haku Maki, Hiroyuki Tajima, Eiichi Shibuya, Kan Kamada and Sadao Watanabe, reputed to be Japan's most famous exclusively Christian artist.

All are innovators as to technique: Maki makes blocks of cement, pouring it into a frame placed on a veneer sheet and then working the texture into the surface. When the cement is dry he creates an effective pattern in relief by pressing thick wet paper onto the block with the soles of his feet. Color is added later.

All studied and later exhibited abroad as well as in their native land. Eiichi Shibuya was a pupil of Friedlander in Paris and his prints have many characteristics of French Post-Impressionism.

The show at Town House was made possible by Harry Timmins of Gallery Graphics in Carmel Valley who selected the prints from his distinguished collection of limited edition graphics. The public is welcome to view this unusual exhibit at the Town House located on Lincoln just south of Eighth in Carmel, 10 a.m.-5 p.m. Monday-Friday.

Reply to interim report by Water Quality Board:

Sanitary District calls proposed ban on outfalls "arbitrary"

Engineers for the Carmel Sanitary District disagree sharply with a recent interim report by the Regional Water Quality Control Board which called for an outright prohibition of discharge of any sewage into nearby coastal waters.

In a letter to the Board dated April 30, David Kennedy of Kennedy Engineers called the proposed ban "an abrogation of the responsibility of the Water Quality Board."

as charged by the legislature in establishing discharge requirements."

Kennedy said that because of new technology, "wastewaters can be treated to such a degree that they can be discharged into any stream, lake, coastal area and even into potable water supply...the effects of discharges even less highly treated than distillation or saline water conversion projects can be expected to have less effect than natural runoff."

The prohibition on ocean dumping "could make reclamation projects economically unfeasible," the letter states, by committing large sums of money to "export" or piping effluent to distant areas to avoid ocean discharge.

The letter goes on to say that the "arbitrary distance and depth requirements for ocean outfalls appear to be...unsupported by facts...and are excessive, considering that some discharges may be small."

Kennedy called the prohibition "a reversal of previous Board policy and stated demands," and said further than "it is highly debatable whether any change in the water quality of Carmel Bay could be determined after removal of the domestic discharges," since the major pollution impact on the bay is caused by "natural conditions in and adjacent to the Bay."

The letter restated the Carmel Sanitary District Board's agreement with two previous conditions regarding discharges proposed by the Water Resources Control Board. These call for monitoring of the effluent within Carmel Bay, and upgrading of the treatment facilities if it is determined that additional protection is required.

Kennedy called this "a rational approach to a complex problem," and characterized the new proposed discharge prohibition as "based on arbitrary and unfounded beliefs completely unsupported by facts."

The water board's interim report and Kennedy's response is expected to add further fuel to the controversy swirling around the Sanitary District's plan to construct a new outfall line that would extend 600 feet into Carmel Bay. Construction on the outfall was help up by a law suit against the District by Tom Hudson of Point Lobos, who charged that discharge from the outfall would pollute his property. The outfall extension is also opposed by scientists and conservationists who fear its effect on the marine environment.

Text of the letter, with minor editing, follows:

We have been asked to comment on the Preliminary Summary Report of the subject plan by the Carmel Sanitary District, as their District Engineer. The Interim Plan, when adopted, is bound to have a significant effect not only on water quality but also on the physical and social development of the entire Region both in the near future and the distant future. Policies established at this time, even though they are "interim," will be difficult to modify in the future. It is critically important therefore that water quality management policies established as part of the Interim Plan be based on a rational and logical basis. To do otherwise would be a great disservice to the general public.

The summary of the proposed Interim Plan...generally presents water quality management concepts that are most desirable, particularly for the unique Central Coastal Region. Achievement of the five water quality management planning goals stated at the end of Chapter 2 should assure the protection and enhancement of our water resources for future generations.

We are most concerned however that some of the proposed implementing provisions, as indicated in the Preliminary Summary Report, will in fact work against the eventual realization of these stated goals. It appears that the flexibility which is absolutely necessary to achieve a workable program for obtaining the planning goals has been eliminated by some of the Interim Plan's stated objectives, guidelines and time schedule. Several of the objectives and guidelines are in conflict with others contained in the proposed Plan and some are actually impossible. The Preliminary Summary Report also contains some misleading information however this generally is not substantial.

Specifically referring to the "General Water Quality Objectives"...we feel that the first one contradicts subsequent objectives and does not provide the flexibility that must exist if a workable program is to result. This objective would create the need for massive storage facilities for wet weather conditions due to the climatic conditions of the Region. Such seasonally fluctuating storage facilities would obviously have a major impact on the land environment. More important however, is that no factual evidence has shown this objective to be... We request that this objective be deleted from the Interim Plan...

We also strongly request that objective No. 14 be deleted due in part to the comments made above and the subjective interpretation of the objective as written, but also because adherence to this objective will cause significantly greater expenditure of public monies than necessary and further, adherence to this objective could preclude the best method of achieving the goals listed...Even though the definition of the areas listed in objective No. 14 is a subjective matter, we would suggest that special requirements for discharges in such areas to protect against detrimental effects may be appropriate if based on facts and carefully considered prior to their promulgation...

We strongly question the inclusion of the section "Prohibition of Discharge" in this Interim Plan. Such prohibitions are an abrogation of the responsibility of the Water Quality Control Board as charged by the legislature in establishing discharge requirements. In view of the technology now available, wastewaters can be treated to such a degree that they can be discharged into any stream, lake, coastal area and even into potable water supply as is done in South Africa. The effects of discharges even less highly treated than distillation or saline water conversion projects can be expected to have less effect than natural runoff. The South Lake Tahoe discharge into Indian Creek Reservoir is a good example. Arbitrary prohibition, which cannot be supported by factual evidence eliminates the possibility of rational engineering economic consideration of alternatives for meeting the real objectives and may be committing large sums to export make it economically unfeasible to develop reclamation.

The proposed prohibition of all coastal outfalls appears to be incorrectly worded and unsupported by facts. The arbitrary distance and depth requirements appear excessive considering that some discharges may be small. Half these amounts may be reasonable and if dispersion and currents are satisfactory, prohibition should permit meeting either of these, not require meeting both. One thousand feet offshore in many places is several hundred feet of depth, resulting in excessively expensive construction. In other places, 100 feet of depth would require several miles of outfall, similarly economically unjustified for small discharges.

Your prohibition...is a reversal of previous Board policy and stated demands and as presently written, domestic waste discharges would be prohibited whereas industrial waste discharges would be allowed within the designated locations. We cannot understand the rationale whereby an industrial discharge, which may have a greater effect on the receiving waters than a domestic discharge, would be allowed while domestic discharge would be banned. More particularly...we know of no factual evidence which would support the need for this prohibition of discharge.

On the contrary, other than minor localized effects from the present discharge, which will be minimized by the Carmel Sanitary District's present improvement program, evidence obtained during the 20 year period of direct discharge has shown no effects from the discharge within Carmel Bay. A prohibition of discharge as proposed would require an extensive export system for removal of all domestic discharges from Carmel Bay. The funds required for such an export system would be much better invested in reclamation facilities. Furthermore, it is highly debatable whether any change in the water quality of Carmel Bay could be determined after removal of the domestic discharges, since the effects of the natural conditions in and adjacent to the Bay appear to have the major impact on Carmel Bay.

The Carmel Sanitary District has previously agreed to two conditions regarding discharges proposed by the State Water Resources Control Board. These conditions are as follows:

1. The applicant shall conduct a comprehensive biological, physical, and chemical monitoring and research study to determine the effects of the discharge within Carmel Bay, terms and details of said study to be approved by the California Regional Water Quality Control Board,

Central Coast Region and the State Water Resources Control Board; and

2. If the study required by Condition 1 shows that the beneficial uses of Carmel Bay and adjacent waters require additional protection, the applicant shall do one or a combination of the following by 1 February 1974: (1) extend outfall, (2) increase degree of treatment, (3) implement an alternate method of discharge or wastewater reclamation.

We feel these conditions establish a procedure for a rational approach to a complex problem. The presently proposed prohibition of discharge is based on arbitrary and unfounded beliefs completely unsupported by facts. We strongly request that "Prohibition of Discharge," item No. 1b be deleted from the Interim Plan.

Careful consideration of this Interim Plan is most important prior to modification and adoption. Modification of a previously established condition is much more difficult than addition of a necessary condition at a later date. We believe that the Interim Plan in its present form is too rigid and will not create a workable, effective, and economic program to actually achieve the goals stated. It is most important to recognize that economic resources are limited as well as natural resources and although some extra expense will be required to solve immediate problems, unnecessary expenditure of public funds must be eliminated whenever possible. This is one of the principal purposes of long range planning.

We request that the proposed Interim Plan be modified as suggested above and that data and information presently being developed be utilized in the preparation of the Final Plan. The ongoing studies will provide the information so necessary for a proper preparation of a Plan that will be a major significance to the Central Coast Region.

We have appreciated the opportunity to comment on the proposed Interim Plan and trust they will be interpreted in the constructive manner intended. Achievement of the five initially stated planning goals is worthy of great effort by all people associated with the Central Coast Region. A proper and flexible Interim Plan will be an additional step in facilitating this achievement.

Very truly yours,

'Privy Council' grapples with need for public restrooms

The city fathers devoted a good part of last week's regular monthly meeting of the city council to discussion of three separate items dealing with a crucial problem—public restrooms.

Two reports from the committee on lands and improvements stimulated some lively discussion on a needed new restroom for the beach, in addition to the long-standing need for restroom facilities in the business district.

The third time bathrooms popped up on the council agenda was a request by the Sunset Center manager to refurbish the three restrooms in the city-owned cultural center.

The councilmen authorized the expenditure of not more than $2000 for preliminary architectural plans for the construction of a new public restroom for Carmel Beach. The new facility, which may be moved from its present site on the beach just south of Ocean Avenue, will also be designed to house the city's beach buggy.

Councilman Frank

Falge balked at the projected cost of a new facility, estimated at $25,000, and suggested that the present restroom be spruced up.

His fellow member of the lands and improvements committee, Bernard Anderson, took exception to Falge's suggestion, declaring that the present restroom is "absolutely not in conformity with the facilities Carmel should have."

He called the beach restroom "a disgrace to Carmel" and backed the construction of a new restroom "to take care of the heavy use we are getting."

Anderson said a totally new facility was required because the present restroom is constructed of Carmel Stone and its continual use results in what he termed "a perpetual stink." He also made reference to the sewage problem, pointing out that the restrooms were "almost below the sewer level," and this creates additional problems for the city public works department which has to periodically clean out sand from the flow line.

This was confirmed by Bill Askew, the city's superintendent of public works who said the present restroom created a constant maintenance problem. He said repair and refurbishing of the present 35-year-old facility was impractical, partially because channels for the pipes were allowed when the concrete floor was poured.

Askew said the restroom was originally used with a septic tank, but that it barely "made grade" when it was hooked up to the sewer system. The heavy increase in use makes it virtually unusable, he said, especially during periods of peak load.

Mayor Barney Laiolo, referring to the additional use of a new facility for storage of the city's beach patrol buggy, said the city would probably save "in police work a couple of hours a night" which are now necessary to drive the buggy from the beach to the city property where it is now stored on Junipero and Fourth.

Councilman Falge abstained from the final vote, which prompted Councilman Eben Whittlesey to remark drily, "Then you won't be able to use the new restroom, Frank."

Whittlesey asked speedy action on the new restroom, and suggested that it might be dedicated at the annual summer Sandcastle Contest on the beach.

The cost of the project, estimated at $25,000, will be borne by funds accumulated by the city's five percent hostelry tax.

The council also grappled with the problem of badly needed restrooms in the commercial district. At present, there are no public facilities for use by either visitors or residents. Gasoline stations in the center of the village used to provide this service, but had to lock their restroom doors when the maintenance problem got out of hand.

The council's committee on lands and improvements will talk to service station operators to see how they would feel about the city giving some form of assistance so that the restrooms could be made available again to the public.

Councilman Whittlesey favored the proposal, but also spoke at some length about the need for public facilities. "Other cities—Monterey for instance—provide restroom facilities for visitors. Why can't we?" he said.

"I think we are tending to disregard a problem that is getting more acute," he continued. "The need is increasing and it won't go away—not only for visitors to our city, but for our own residents, including elderly people and children. It's a sort of basic problem which we have to face up to as a matter of human decency and to prevent misuse of private property," he said.

He also said that it was "unrealistic" of the city to say that a public restroom in the central district was not feasible because of vandalism. "It's just as important as having our public works department out planting trees," he said.

As the discussion drew to a close and the council voted on the matter, Mayor Laiolo took advantage of the occasion to announce, "We now have a privy council on the council."

The council approved the refurbishing of the three restrooms at Sunset Center including the installation of new wash basins as part of a package of improvements to Sunset Center that will cost a total of $5,035. All the improvements were listed in an article in the Pine Cone April 29.

DAYS NUMBERED: The public restroom on famed Carmel beach will be replaced by a new structure to meet the increased use. The city council last week authorized the expenditure of not more than $2,000 for architectural plans for a new public facility that will also house the city's beach buggy (photo by George T.C. Smith).

Foundation seeks rezoning for 50 low-income apartments

The Carmel Foundation is seeking re-zoning of property it owns on Lincoln between Eighth and Ninth Streets to construct 50 new low-rent apartment units and a new Town House to further its programs for older persons in Carmel.

At present, the Foundation furnishes 23 units of low cost housing in Hazeltine Court on Lincoln and Fifth, and at Trevett Court on Dolores between Fourth and Fifth. The latter two properties would be sold.

The present Town House structure, inadequate to meet the expanded needs of the Foundation, would be torn down and a new, larger building erected.

The Foundation is a private, non-profit organization that conducts social, recreational, educational and cultural programs for aged persons in Carmel. Because of its non-profit status, properties owned by the Foundation are taken off the tax rolls.

In a letter to the city council, Florence Beard, president of the Foundation said that "the assessed value of the real estate returned to the tax rolls will substantially exceed the value of the property to be re-zoned that is presently on the tax rolls (and which will be removed from the tax rolls once it is improved for the Foundation's use)."

Suggested wording for a proposed ordinance that would establish the desired multiple dwelling district reads: "...the population of this city is increasingly made up of elderly and retired people who are not able to maintain family units in single family dwellings, therefore creating an increasing need for small units in multiple dwellings...and the need for multiple dwellings has already created a number of illegal units which, if abated, would result in the loss of needed housing for a number of elderly and retired persons."

Mrs. Ruth Ware, executive director of the Foundation told the Pine Cone the proposal will fill a long-sought need in the community.

Any objections based on anticipated traffic problems would not be justified, she said, because one of the requirements for tenancy is that the occupant can not own an auto. Also, 11 spaces for off-street visitor parking are part of the proposed plan, plus five spaces for permanent staff parking.

Architect for the project is Jim Pruitt of Carmel. Mrs. Ware said his design calls for low-profile two-story apartments in three groups of 16-20 per group. The clustering avoids the "institutional" look, she said. In addition, the ample landscaping planned will be in keeping with the character of Carmel.

Mrs. Ware also pointed out that the new apartment units will serve Carmel residents only. One of the requirements for tenancy is that the occupant fulfill a three-year residency requirement in Carmel. The Foundation has a long waiting list for the low-income apartments, she said.

The proposal was made formally at last week's meeting of the city council. Several of the councilmen praised the work of the Foundation, and expressed general satisfaction with the concept of more low-income housing to serve the growing need in the community.

Councilman Eben Whittlesey said the proposal is "intended to meet a very real need in the city. We have a lot of older people who are finding it very hard to maintain a home in the city in fact, many have been driven out of the city by the high cost of living."

He said there was "no question" of the value of the work of the Foundation, and declared that "something of this sort is needed to fulfill one of the needs exposed by their work."

The re-zoning request was received formally by the council and referred to the planning commission for appropriate action.

The conscience of Carmel:

'OK' zoning for Carmel flood plain

BY GUNNAR NORBERG

JUST WHAT, you ask, do we mean by using such a flip descriptive as "OK" to the sort of zoning which might be right for the flood-prone lands near the mouth of the Carmel River, and on both sides of State Highway 1 in the neighborhood of the Carmel River bridge, and most particularly on the Odello farmland just south of that bridge?

That's what we mean: "OK". The Monterey County Zoning Ordinance is full of letters and numbers which in a variety of combinations indicate just what kind of land uses are allowed in specified areas or "zones." Two of the letters are "O" and "K"—and if you put them together with certain other letter and number combinations, you could just possibly get what most people in the whole lower Carmel River watershed area would probably consider just about "OK."

Not only would you have to put the letters together in some kind of an optimum combination but, in some cases, you would have to trim the specific meanings of the letters used, to their bare essentials. This would mean generally, that you would have to get rid of all, or certainly most, of the so-called "use-permitted uses" which are shown as being possible upon the issuance of a "use permit" in each instance by the County Planning Commission.

LET'S LOOK AT that letter "K," for example. What's allowed under the "K" zoning, just by getting the zoning classification of "K," are essentially "one-family dwellings" and usual "agricultural uses," to which basically there would be little local objection, so long as each dwelling would have to be built on a site at least one acre in size. (And that could be guaranteed by adding a letter and number label to that "OK," which would then make the designation, O-K-B-4.) Trimming that "K" classification to the bare minimum of uses which we have just identified—"one family dwellings" and "agricultural uses"—would eliminate such seriously questionable, but county-allowed "use-permitted uses" under that heading as labor camps, animal hospitals, fertilizer plants, cattle feed yards, or animal sales yards.

Here you might ask, just what's meant by the "O" in front of that "K," in the context in which we seem to be using it.

The County's "O" zone—without trying to play with the airy word the two syllables suggest—is identified as the "open space" zone. The single allowed "use" (without any extra "use permit" for anything extra) is described as "crop and tree farming and grazing of horses, cattle, sheep, and goats." (Again—except perhaps for goats in massive numbers—there would probably be no public outcry against this kind of farm or ranch use in the Carmel River flood-plain.)

THERE ARE A COUPLE of other letters which should be coupled with the "O-K-B-4" designation, to make it meaningful, and those letters are "FP," meaning "flood plain" zoning—for which the county's zoning ordinance provides a classification but for which no specific Carmel River watershed "FP" zoning has been legislated. The single allowed use in an "FP" zone is identified as "crop farming, tree farming, and viticulture"—again, types of rural activity to which little or no public objection would be likely.

If you are familiar with the sort of number and letter combinations used by the county in the lower Carmel Valley and in and about Carmel City environs, you may ask just what's happened to the letter "G," and what it stands for.

The answer is that "G" just doesn't stand for much—just by itself, that is. The only things that can be done in a "G" district are what can be done under some other "lettered" designation—such as, for example, that "K" with which we have just been dealing. If we don't try to include "G" at all, it looks as if we would be better off—because the real "G" trouble is in the sort of "high-density" use which might be sought, and granted, under the "use-permitted uses" which would be possible under the "G" heading. One such use-permitted use could be "resort hotels" with up-to-ten-units-per-acre—something which could perform the same kind of mayhem on basic one-dwelling-unit-per-acre-zoning that City Reconstruction Company has in mind—though under a differently lettered heading—for that Odello artichoke farm down by the Carmel River.

NEARLY ALL the Odello acres to the east of State Highway 1 now have a designation which includes the peril potential of the "G" zoning though, of course, it also includes the basic protection of "B-4" which means essentially no more than one dwelling per acre, and that one dwelling per acre would prevail, unless a special use permit of the kind just described were to be sought and then granted in a special proceeding. The existing zoning we have just mentioned as being applicable to the east of Highway 1 on the Odello farmland also includes the letter "K" to which we have already substantially alluded. The whole designation is, in fact, written as "K-G-J-B-4." (The letter "J" simply means that no trailers as permanent homes are allowed on the property described.)

Except for a strip of small-lot residential-agricultural zoning along the west side of Highway 1 on the Odello land, everything there between that highway and the state-owned beach and bird sanctuary is in what's called "interim zoning" which means that, until it is specifically zoned, development there is restricted to that one dwelling per acre formula which we have already described in other connections. Essentially, then, the existing zoning on nearly all the Odello land calls fundamentally for a restriction to that one dwelling per acre formula, or to the sort of farm use to which it is now being put. And the only danger—though one full of real peril to the environment—is in the so-called "use-permitted uses"—which, if granted, by county officials, could make a mockery of that basic one dwelling per acre rule.

And these "use-permitted uses" are indeed, and many times, the avenue through which the breaking down of the fundamental intent of any specific zone is achieved. And this is often the case because once a public outcry has failed to stop a particular rezoning proposal—as, for instance, in the recent Val Verde matter—the public, wearied and heartsick, does not present the kind of unified and determined public opposition which, in the first effort, had so nearly managed to halt the originally threatened rezoning.

SPEAKING OF that Val Verde matter, the developer in that case, Arbor Development Company of Mountain View, is due soon to present a request for a use permit which it needs if it is going to be allowed to go ahead with the kind of plan to which a united public had originally expressed its determined opposition. (The public hearing on that Val Verde "use permit" request is scheduled for May 26 before the County Planning Commission in the courthouse in Salinas—just in case you want to be heard by that public body at that time.)

But let's get back to that "OK" zoning and see just what sort of letter and number sequence we would have if what we've just talked about here were to be enacted.

The alphabet-and-digit designation would look like this: O-K-F-P-B-4. If you like it, and if you think it would be right for the territory we've talked about, let the County Planning Commission and the County Board of Supervisors know what you think.

If we add a reference to agriculture, we could suggest that the right intent of appropriate zoning for the whole Carmel River watershed area could be the sort of language which has stood for more than forty years at the head of the Carmel City zoning ordinance, and which serves as its purpose clause. Here's how it would look:

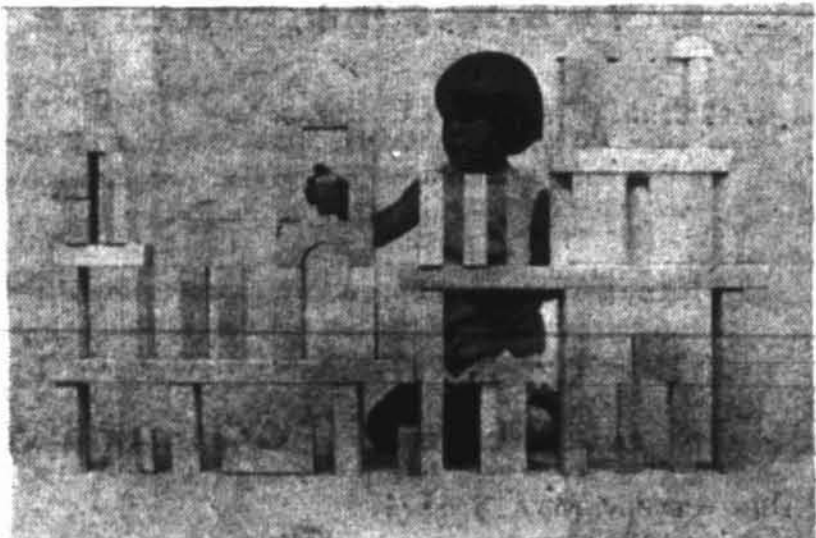

"The entire Carmel River watershed area is primarily, essentially, and predominantly a residential and agricultural area in which business and commerce have been, are now, and are intended to be in the future, subordinated to its residential and agricultural character."

WOULDN'T YOU LIKE to see the County Board of Supervisors start to think in terms like that, and then to suit their action to that kind of thinking? I certainly would.

SAFEWAY

SAN JOSE State Beach is noted for its steep pitch and rough sand which swiftly slips from underfoot in churning water. Annie Houstap of Carmel, a Monterey Peninsula College student, and "Shannon" braved a brisk surf.

Water sport in Carmel area is fun, but can be dan

By STEVE HAUKE

The drowning death of an 18-year-old Alameda skindiver near the mouth of the Carmel River April 25 tragically points up the unpredictability and danger of the waves and currents that visit local shores from Carmel Beach to Carmel Highlands.

The skindiver, William Thomas Baker, Jr., was hit by a large wave. His body was recovered the next day.

One does not have to check far back through the records to find other cases of drownings.

On Feb. 23, 1970, two young Monterey men drowned when their kayak capsized off San Jose Beach, also known as Monastery Beach. Five-hundred youths who had gathered for an impromptu rock festival witnessed the tragedy.

On Dec. 3, 1969, a five-year-old Minnesota boy, climbing on the rocks at Yankee Point during a lull in wave action, was swept to his death when the waves suddenly soared to heights of 20 and 25 feet. The youth's courageous father also died attempting to save him.

On Feb. 3 of the same year, a 15-year-old Salinas boy attempting to cross the mouth of the Carmel River drowned in the bay when, according to his friend, the sand went out from under his feet.

On May 22, 1969, a 32-year-old skindiver scuba diving near the mouth of San Jose Creek lost his life. On that same weekend, two Marina youths drowned off Moss Landing while clam hunting and a skindiver lost his life off Point Pinos.

James Hughes, officer in charge of the Pacific Grove Marine Rescue Patrol, which responds to all Carmel Bay water rescue emergencies, and Don Rich, area manager for Point Lobos State Reserve and Carmel River State Beach, both think that common sense could have averted most of the tragedies and most of the many near-drownings that have occurred over the same period of time.

"Against all common sense" is how Rich describes an incident three years ago in which two men climbed out to the very end of Point Lobos' Sea Lion Point. They were swept from the rocks; one died, the other was lucky to escape with injuries.

"They had absolutely no business out there whatsoever," Rich said. "If people would just use the sense they were supposedly born with they'd stay out of trouble."

"Anyone who has known the sea for a couple of years respects it."

"A lot of it is just mostly common sense," Hughes says. "It would be swell if you had none (water accidents)...but, people being people..."

Both Hughes, a Pacific Grove city councilman, and Rich agree that a great water hazard in the Carmel Bay area is simply walking too close to the sea, especially along Carmel River State Beach and San Jose Beach and the shoreline between.

Walking over the mouth of the Carmel River, even when the water is running down the beach at a very shallow depth, one encounters poor footing. Describing what probably happened to the 15-year-old Salinas boy on Feb. 3, 1969, Hughes says, "...the sand sort of shifts on you."

Because most residents of the area realize that although the waves may be of small size one moment they can be raging the next, Hughes says, "The biggest danger is to the casual tourist and sightseer, mostly..."

The inexperienced, he said, take small boats around points, stand too far out on rocks to take pictures or fish and walk too near the sea on rough days.

Rich, who doesn't claim to be an authority on water dangers, nevertheless has, in his capacity as area manager, observed the sea and some dangerous situations.

As an example of how quickly the wave action can change, he recalls an incident that occurred three or four years ago with one of the seasonal openings of the mouth of the Carmel River.

Some 150 people were on hand for the event, all gathered around the channel and standing on the highest point of the beach. A wave hadn't broken over the beach in an hour when all of a sudden all 150 persons were doused by a huge and quickly breaking wave.

Rich describes such waves as "freak waves."

"They come out of nowhere. They are completely unexpected."

A few years ago Rich's wife was swept off the rocks at Point Lobos by such a wave. She made it back to shore on her own, Rich said, because she didn't panic.

"A lot of people panic themselves into trouble," he said.

In the event a person is swept out, Rich said, it is best to not try to swim back against the tide grip. It is safest outside the surf line, he said, where the person can swim laterally and search for an area where the incoming and receding waves are smaller and provide a way back to shore.

"Many swimmers have saved themselves this way."

If a way can't be found in, and there is a possibility of help, it is wisest to wait for help, he said.

Rich, who said he has seen it happen before, said trying to fight your way in while you are being carried out can be "suicide."

The Pacific Grove Marine Rescue Patrol, which

responds to emergencies from Moss Landing to Carmel Highlands and sometimes a little further south, finds that about 20 percent of its responding calls are to this area. The patrol, which was formed in 1963, averages about a call a week, Hughes said.

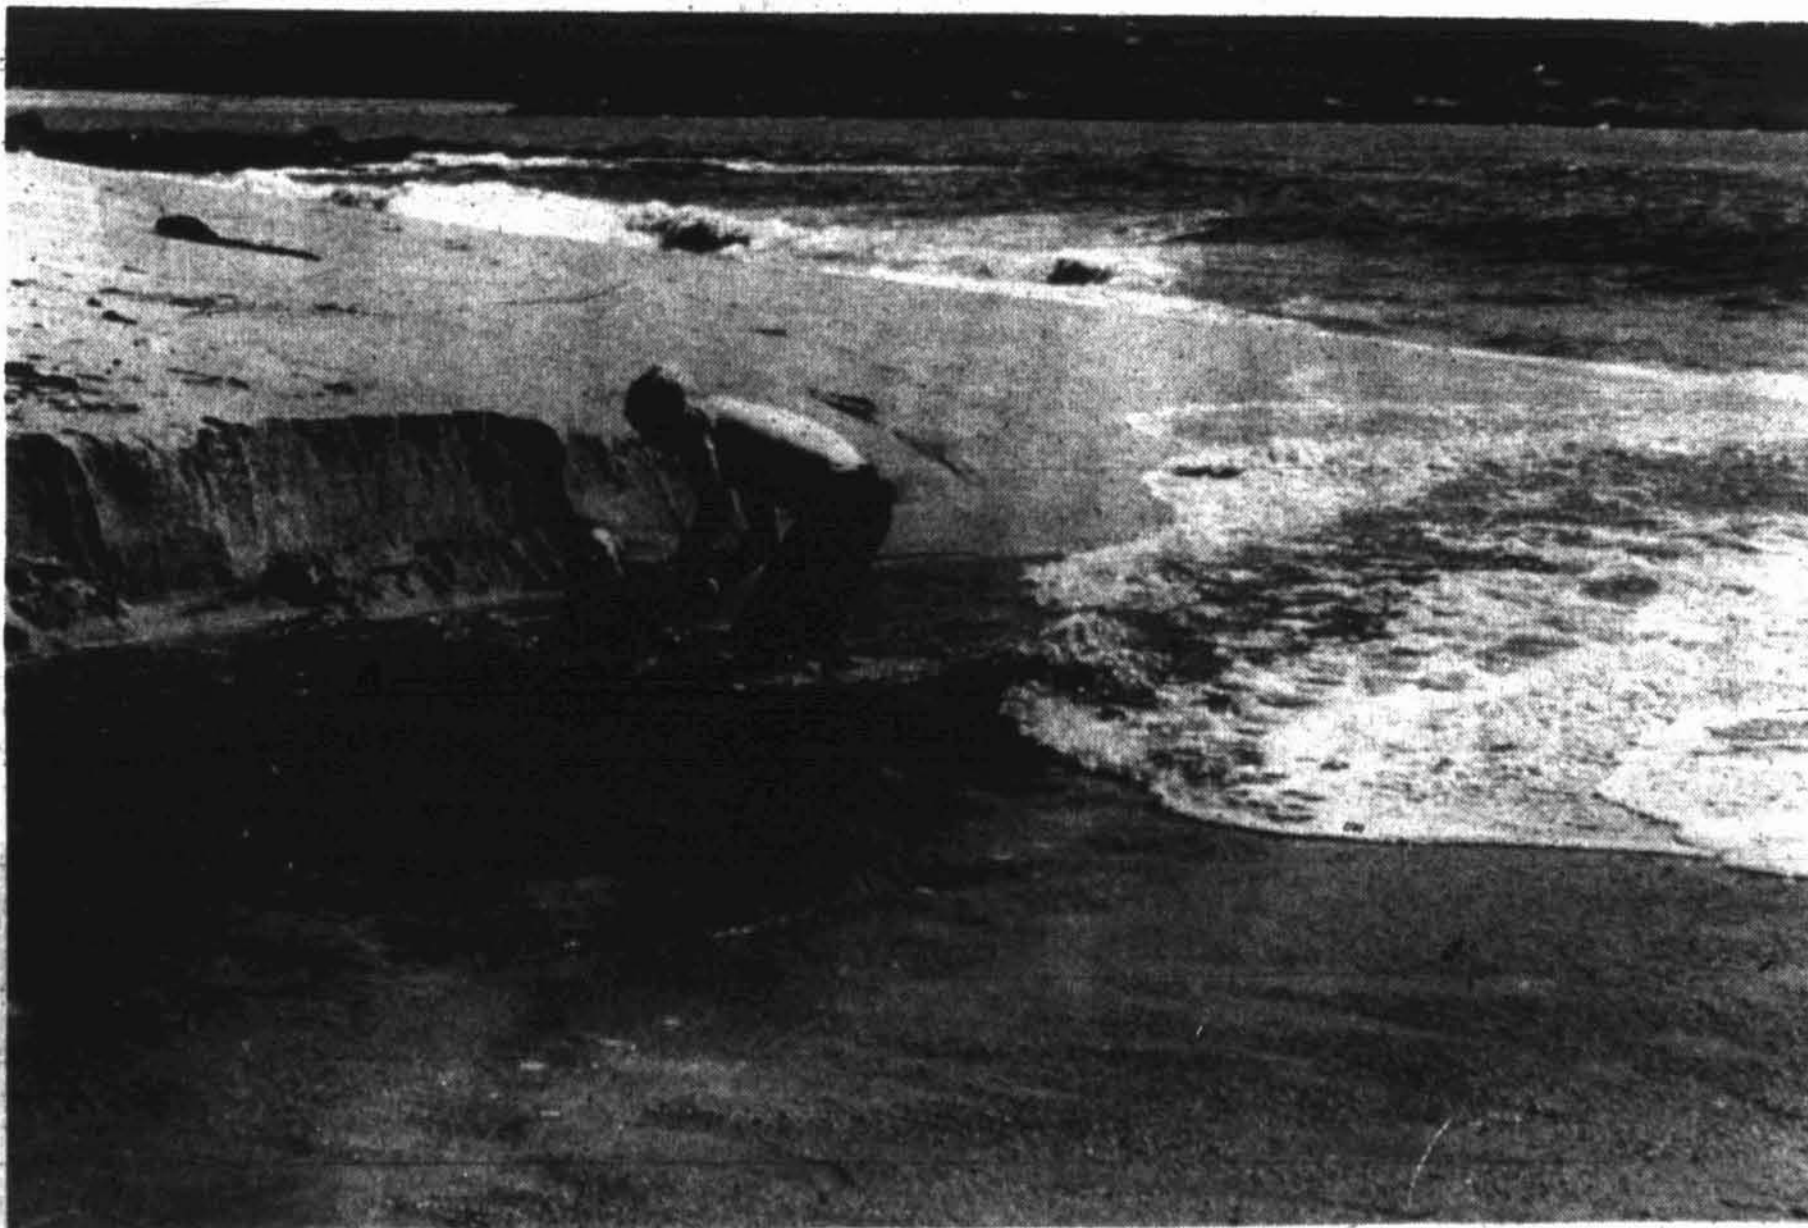

There were about eight drownings in the Peninsula area last year, two or three so far this year.

"For the amount of usage of the water facilities around here—fishing, swimings, surfing, boating, diving and other water sports—" Hughes said, "the number of fatalities is low."

"Practically everything we get is avoidable. Usually it is a result of a breach of some water safety rule," he said.

But, he adds, "We've warned people on some thing some days and an hour later we are out there recovering them."

The best way to combat this, Hughes said, is to in-

SHE WAS floating down the mouth of the Carmel River, he was going to catch her. As she approached, an incoming wave swelled the water volume. She lost her balance and for a moment panicked before he helped her up. In the process, he sank almost knee-deep in the shifting sand.

CARMEL WAVES attract surfers daily even during the coldest months. Waves this pair attack are of average size. The city-owned beach is posted with "swim at your own risk" signs, absolving the city of liability.

ANNIE HOUSTON contemplates waves breaking on rocks at Point Lobos. Rangers continually warn visitors to stay off rocks when waves are breaking. A moment after this picture was taken, a wave broke over the spot where Annie was standing.

dangerous

struct people in water safety (he speaks at schools throughout the area on the subject) and to teach children to swim early.

Diving, said Hughes, who is a Pacific Grove dentist, is a safe sport as long as the diver is experienced, and "very few of the drownings here are divers."

William Thomas Baker, jr. was not experienced and, Hughes said, "That's no place to be on your first dive, even under good conditions."

The divers that do get into trouble are usually, like Baker was, from out of the area. Having made the trip, Hughes said, they are unlikely to be easily dissuaded from making a dive although warned of dangers.

While the bay is a good area for diving, Hughes said winds which come up suddenly, usually late in the day, "can be dangerous."

Hughes thinks that although some consider signs "visible pollution," the beaches should be well posted. He points out that Asilomar State Beach is posted every 100 feet or so.

If there are to be few signs, he said, then "you've got to put those signs where they are going to be seen." He recommends that warning signs be placed at points where people enter the beaches.

Hughes said there have been few incidents off Carmel Beach in recent years.

As to some pleasure boaters, who concentrate on luxury appointments while forgetting safety features, he quips:

"They'll spend a lot of money for their pleasure, but they won't spend two cents for their lives."

Oh, and Pebble Beach's Cypress Point and Point Joe. Hughes recommends boaters and divers stay away from those areas altogether.

Which is just common sense.

SAN JOSE Beach sign warns: "Hazardous Water Area. No Lifeguard." Later in the afternoon more than 100 skin divers spent the afternoon near this point. The state is not liable for accidents in areas posted "no lifeguard."

KIDS ON San Jose Beach enjoy an edge of foam. A few feet closer to the water suction of powerful enough to upset a small child.

Remember When?

50 YEARS AGO:

From the Pine Cone, May 12, 1921

A group of the Lasky Famous players are in Carmel on location for another movie which is to be filmed here. The title of the picture will be "Everything For Sale."

Captain and Mrs. John Barneson are planning to build on their Pebble Beach homesite this season. Captain Barneson will anchor his palatial yacht, the Invader, in Carmel bay within the near future.

Constable Mike Noon and a squad of military police from the Monterey Presidio passed through Carmel on a real man hunt last week. The criminal who has been alarming all of Monterey by starting many fires was supposed to have headed this way.

Deputy Sheriff W.A. Oyer arrived in Carmel with a load of subpoenas last Saturday, and spent a busy afternoon in their distribution.

Miss Anna Wolf, who has recently returned from Armenia and Syria, will talk informally in regard to her work with orphan children in those countries, at the residence of Mrs. W.P. Silva, on Carmelo avenue, this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. An interesting account of conditions in the Near East is assured.

The tri-monthly dance at the Highlands Inn last Saturday evening was well attended by the numerous guests.

25 YEARS AGO:

From the Pine Cone, May 10, 1946

Karen von Meier, winner of the Carmel American Legion Auxiliary Essay contest, has been awarded third prize in the American Legion Auxiliary District Contest.

A baby girl, Margaret, was born May 3 to the family of Dr. and Mrs. Russell Williams of Carmel Highlands.

The British bride of William J. Tocher, jr., the former Joan Emblen of London, arrived in Carmel recently to join her husband.

A forty year separation of two brothers and a sister ended last week when Fred M. Locke of Pebble Beach greeted his brother Percy Locke of Seattle, Washington, and his sister, Miss Cora Locke of Prescott, Ontario, Canada.

MICHEL AND Hilda Nollet, who own the Swiss Tavern, are genuinely Swiss. But—they speak two different native tongues, of Switzerland's four, and have to communicate with each other in a third language, English.

TWO CARMEL women, neighbors, shopped together at a nursery and each bought a Bird of Paradise plant.

One planted hers in her sunny garden. The other lady put hers in an ornamental planter in her patio. Both Birds of Paradise flourished but only the one in the garden had a bloom. The owner of the container plant was miffed and envious. So—She bought a plastic Bird of Paradise flower and staked it in the planter.

"That must have shamed my plant," she declared, "because it finally grew a flower of its own!"

P.S. She also moved the planter into the sun.

NATIVE BUT not typical were the three lunching together in a Carmel restaurant on a leisurely Saturday, husband, wife and teen-age daughter. The wife wore her hair below her shoulders, the daughter's was cropped in a close cap—while the husband's locks, obviously professionally styled, were longer than the girl's.

A SEVEN-year-old Pine Cone salesman is still worried that one of his customers didn't get her paper a couple of weeks ago. She bought it from him as she went out the Post Office door, where she had tied her white Poodle before getting her mail.

Well, she decided she might get ink on the dog and told the boy she'd come back later for the Pine Cone she had paid him for. Before she returned, the salesman had to go home, so trustingly he left her paper in the Post Office planter, weighted down with a rock.

IN KEEPING with the Carmel Business Association's campaign to leave the parking spaces for customers, Harriet Meyer, CBA secretary, applauded the news that the Nelson Foremans of the Vintage Shop and the Don Yarbros of Yarbros' stationery have moved to homes close to the Village. Added Harriet, "Maybe we'll solve the parking problem yet."

BUMPER STRIP about town: "Support mental health or I'll run over you."

CHINA-BORN Tom Chew, who plans to open a restaurant in Carmel, says yes, it will serve Chinese food. "But Mandarin—we're from North China—not Cantonese."

And does he like American food? "It's all right," concedes Mr. Chew, "but it has no flavor. But I like Jewish food!"

FOUR CARMEL MEMBERS of the Monterey Peninsula chapter of the Society for the Preservation of Barbershop Singing are shown in rehearsal for the organization's annual concert June 4 and 5. Titled "Harmony At Sunset", the musical concert and variety show will be presented at Sunset Auditorium in Carmel, at 8:14 p.m. each evening. The singers shown above are Gordon Gulbranson, Don Lamar, Neil Keefer and Harold Nielsen. In addition to the appearance of the entire Monterey Peninsula Chapter Chorus, the concert will include some of the nation's foremost barbershop quartets from other areas.

Multi-media 'Embryo' at Sunset May 29

People interested in understanding contemporary art forms might find themselves "turned on" by the Multi-Media performance titled "Embryo" to be presented at Sunset Theatre in Carmel Saturday, May 29, at 8:15 p.m.

"Embryo" uses numerous projectors for flashing images of film, slides, and polarized light on three or more screens, and supplementing the resulting visual effects with music created "live" on the spot with a Moog Synthesizer and a piano and superimposes the element of the motions of modern dance as produced by a group of six dancers with material choreographed especially for this performance.

The program was conceived by a UCSC team including Keith Muscutt, lecturer and technician in dramatic art; Eric Regener, Director of UCSC's electronic music lab and teacher of music theory and composition; and Ruth Solomon, solo dancer with Jean Erdman Dance Theatre and member of UCSC dance faculty.

Local people from the Sunset staff and Monterey Peninsula College have seen the show, and their enthusiasm for it persuaded Sunset Theatre to bring it to Carmel, said Sunset manager Frank Riley.

Read, Schmidt appointed professors at Navy school

Professors Robert Read of Carmel and Louis Schmidt of Pebble Beach will be promoted to full professorships July 1 at the Naval Postgraduate School.

Dr. Read, 42, has been with the faculty since 1961 and Dr. Schmidt, 45, since 1964.

Schmidt, a Chicago native, considers himself a practical as well as theoretical engineer. He obtained his "nuts and bolts" experience taking three jet transport projects through design to operational development stages for two major aircraft companies. He shares patents for equipment in two of the aircraft.

Schmidt enjoys flying his four-place Cessna 210.

"I often fly students to West Coast research facilities on school business," he says.

He has been active in scouting for years and recently became a member of the tri-county executive board in Salinas.

Read is a mathematical statistician. In 1965 he left the mathematics department for operations analysis department. More recent departmental restructuring placed him with management professors in the Operations Research and Administrative Sciences Department. The new department, with 85 members, is the largest in the school.

Read, born in Columbus, Ohio, says he enjoys Peninsula life.

"There is a tremendous amount of cultural activity for a community of this size," he says. "When you add the outdoor activity, you have a beautiful place to live."

Read received his B.S. degree from Ohio State University in 1951 and his mathematical statistics doctorate in 1957 at the University of California, Berkeley. He and his wife, Sandy, live with their three boys at San Carlos and Vista in Carmel.

Schmidt earned four degrees from the California Institute of Technology in 1946, 1950, 1956 and 1963, the latter a doctorate in aeronautics.

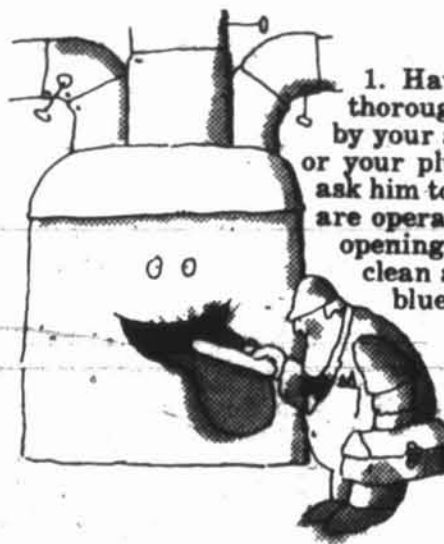

He and his wife, Marguerite, live with their son, Phillip, 16, an Eagle Scout, in Pacific Grove's Troop 129, at 1927 Rodeo Road, Pebble Beach.

Read and Schmidt were joined in the promotion to full professorship by Dr. Gilles Cantin of Monterey and Dr. Max Woods of Salinas.

CONGRATULATING EACH other on their appointment as full professors at the Naval Postgraduate School are (left to right) Max Woods of Salinas, Robert Read of Carmel, Gilles Cantin of Monterey and Louis Schmidt of Pebble Beach.

Household safety: four things you should do. And a couple you shouldn't.

1. Have your gas appliances thoroughly checked once a year by your appliance or furnace man or your plumber. While he's there ask him to make sure safety pilots are operating properly, air openings on burners are clean and set for a blue flame.

2. Get rid of any rusted or loose-fitting vent and flue pipes. Have them checked annually. If you ever should smell a gas leak call PG&E immediately.

3. Make sure that burners and controls on your gas furnace, wall or floor heater are clean at all times. And be sure to clean or replace dirty furnace filters periodically.

4. When you disconnect appliances, pull plug first from the outlet. Also make sure electric tools are properly grounded, and frayed or broken electric cords are replaced.

Don't place furniture or drapes over or close to any heater. Or let gas accumulate before lighting a gas pilot. Be sure that gas range burners are off completely when not in use.

Never connect too many appliances to one outlet or circuit. And never let youngsters tamper with cords or outlets.

And remember, too, that we're always ready to help. If you call for a PG&E service man to check-out any gas leak or gas service problem, ask him to show you where your gas pilots are located and how to go about relighting them. If repairs or parts are needed, call an appliance or furnace service man or your plumber.

REFLECTIONS ON THE MUSICAL SCENE II The Monterey Peninsula Chamber Music Society

EVALUATING the 1970-71 season of the Monterey Peninsula Chamber Music Society, one comes to the conclusion that it was an interesting and highly successful season—musically, at least. The programs and the performers ranged from the baroque through the classical to the modern and contemporary.

Starting off with the Dolmetsch and Saxby Due, in compositions of the Baroque and the Pre-Baroque for recorders and harpsichord, and also including other ancient instruments, the players set the tone for a conception of the innate musical quality of these instruments. The competence of these two artists augmented the enjoyment of these works performed in the ancient style.

A recital of modern music by Andor Toth (violin) and Katie Clare Mazzeo (piano) and Rosario Mazzeo (clarinet) furnished an evening of unusual instrumentation. Encompassing music of the twentieth century, both for duos and trios, and played with the beautiful accentuation of these three artists, it was an impressionable concert in this genre.

The Dimov Quartet, the State Quartet of Bulgaria, furnished elegant and articulated performances of works in the classical and modern vein. These performances were an outstanding revelation of the integrated, beautiful and concise playing that we have come to expect from European string ensembles, no matter what the geographical origin.

The Gabor Rejto-Adolph Baller recital of compositions for the cello and piano once again showed what effective programming and involved musicianship can do. The carefully attuned playing of these musicians gave the audience a freshness and insight into the beautiful cello-piano literature, the type of sonata playing that is rarely heard.

The Cirone Percussion Players, which closed this series, was unique inasmuch as it featured the works of living contemporary composers for a combination of unusual percussion instruments. It stressed brilliantly the arresting and impressive musical expression presented by this type of writing. By employing various variations of movements, it tended to delineate the expressive tempi of the modern technological world that we live in.

On Saturday at Sunset Cultural Center in Carmel, the Monterey Peninsula Chamber Music Society will present the violin and piano audition winners, John Morrice and James Shuck, in a recital of classical music for their instruments, respectively.

The Society, with its board of directors and its President, Dr. Herman Medwin, has done an impressive job in the programming, arranging and effectively organizing the appearances of these ensembles.

The 1971-72 season will present five truly outstanding concerts, three of which are, at this time, definitely scheduled to appear.

The Danzi Wind Quintet from Holland, founded in 1958 for their appearance at the Holland Festivals in July of that year, will play in Carmel. Since then, the Quintet has concertized all over Europe and in 1960 went to Israel for a very successful tour.

The Prague Quartet from Czechoslovakia, founded in 1956, and since then playing internationally, in Europe, the Near and Far East, as well as in Australia and in North and South America, is scheduled.

The Warsaw Quintet from Poland, organized in 1960, is also set. The success of their first concert in Warsaw was such that they have since been invited to concertize all over Europe, and have now undertaken an American tour.

Two more chamber music groups will be scheduled.

On May 16 and 17, the Monterey County Symphony Orchestra, the Monterey Peninsula Choral Society, both under the baton of Maestro Haymo Taeuber, and with soloists James Tippey (bass), Paul Raabe (tenor), Glenna DeWeese (contralto), and Norma Jean Hodges (soprano) will present the monumental oratorio, Elijah, Op. 70 by Felix Mendelssohn.

Standing at the end of the composer's life like a magnificent valediction, Elijah is his last complete major work.

The oratorio is based on words from the Old Testament and was completed in August, 1846, the first performance taking place in the Town Hall of Birmingham, England (as part of the music festival of that city). A number of revisions of this work were made by the composer and the final version was given in London in April, 1847.

The text, by the composer and Pastor Julius Schubring, is in two sections. In the first part, Elijah invokes a drought in Israel in punishment of the people for forsaking the true God of Israel, and following the graven images of the god Baal. Elijah then effects his miracles and destroys the prophets of Baal.

In the second section, enemies arise and attempt to destroy Elijah. After suffering tribulations at the hand of Jezebel, Elijah receives the protection of the Lord, who conducts him to Heaven in a flaming chariot.

If Elijah possesses some of the dramatic elements of opera, as has often been said, it is because the composer intended it to be so, as is evident by his notes on the work. Certainly, the oratorio opens in a dramatic vein; a spirited one-sentence recitative by Elijah announcing the drought, followed by a dirge-like orchestral overture. Cries of anguish in the chorus intensify the theatrical effect. This effect is soon developed further through strong, stirring recitatives, extended dialogues, and rolling choruses.

The lyrical element is always present, and it is in this lyricism that the oratorio presents its noblest music: in Elijah's poignant aria, "It Is Enough;" the aria of the Angel, "O Rest In The Lord;" and Obadiah's song, "If With All Your Hearts."

This work is the ultimate fulfillment of Mendelssohn's life and his musical genius.

A STRING ORCHESTRA drawn from the Hidden Valley Seminars alumnae in California gave a concert at the All Saints Church in Carmel Saturday as a special benefit for the 1971 Seminars, due to start June 27.

Listening to this group of young people playing, one is again impressed with the intense dedication to the music, as well as to the satisfying, professional sound produced.

Under the compelling and incisive direction of Dr. Michael Zearott, who also acted as the piano soloist in the Tommaso Giordani Keyboard Concerto, conducting from the piano, the rhythmic and harmonic whole of this rarely heard work was beautifully performed. The strings sang with a lyric and accentuated pulsation in the three movements of the concerto, while the solo piano part as played by Dr. Zearott was free-flowing, impulsive and crisply delineated—all forces unified in a beautiful presentation.

The Benjamin Britten Variations on a Theme of Frank Bridge (Britten's teacher) was written in 1937 and the theme used is from the second of Bridge's Three Idylls. In this work, the theme first appears in the first violins after a brief introduction. Ten variations then follow. The first (adagio) consists of soft chords in the strings. The second is a march; the third, a Romance; the fourth, an Aria Italiana, a satire on the Rossini type of aria.

In the Bourree classique, and the Wiener Walzer, two other musical styles are caricatured. In Moto Perpetuo, the theme appears in the strings tremolando. Two brief lyrical sections follow, a Funeral March and a Chant. The work ends with a fugue.

This interesting and rarely heard work was projected by the ensemble with an intensity and keen interpretation in a performance of unusual grace and sensitivity.

The Edward Elgar Introduction and Allegro for Strings brings to mind some of the nostalgic, introspective character of the music of the Victorian era, particularly that of Delius. Written in 1904, in the style of a classic concerto, this work utilizes the string quartet as the traditional "concertino," with the rest of the orchestra serving as the "ripieno." The opening subject is given by the quartet and the strings, followed by a second theme in the quartet. After some development, a Welsh melody is heard in the solo viola, with which the Introduction ends.

Here again, one marvels at the perfection and beautiful intonation produced by the ensemble, especially so, with so little time for rehearsals together.

Dr. Zearott has undoubtedly infused into these young people a sense of involvement and interpretation that is indeed rare.

Astrology forum at Sunset Center tonight

BY FRANK H. RILEY, MANAGER SUNSET CENTER

TONIGHT IS THE NIGHT to attend the free public forum on Astrology at Sunset Theatre. Time is 7:30 p.m. The three-member panel will give you a briefing on various aspects of the subject, and from then on what happens will depend on you. Questions and discussion from the floor will be responded to by the panel members. You are invited, and we hope that you will come.

THIS WEEK WE ROUNDED UP our spirited "Carousel" horses and returned them to the corral at the high school. Hope you enjoyed them as much as we did. To replace them in the theatre foyer we have just hung an exhibit of paintings and constructions by a group of young Seaside artists. These works have been collected by the Young Adults for Action and are particularly related to the YABA program to be presented at Sunset Theatre on Friday evening at 8 p.m. Come to the performance, if possible, to learn what this active group is doing to help solve community problems. But, if you miss the Friday presentation, visit the theatre for one of the other concerts or performances taking place between now and the 24th when the exhibit will come down.

DON'T FORGET Patio Picnic Days every Wednesday in May at noon. You bring the lunch—we have the coffee—it's free. On Wednesday, the 19th, we will be joined by several busloads of seniors who will be on the garden tour. Plan to be here to welcome and meet our visitors.

THREE CONCERTS COMING UP—Monterey Peninsula Chamber Music Society presents their two contest winners, James Shuck, pianist, and John Morrice, violinist, on Saturday while the Carmel Music Society presents Vincent Russo, baritone, on Friday, the 21st. Monday is the date for the season's final symphony concert which joins the Monterey Peninsula Choral Society with the orchestra in a magnificent program.

TO CLOSE, we again urge you to make plans to attend "EMBRYO" the multi-media performance scheduled for the 29th at 8:15 p.m. You must not miss this unique presentation. We are so sure you will enjoy it that we are bringing the troupe from Santa Cruz to perform here.

It is like nothing you have seen before—you will be startled, amused and pleased by the performance. If you are interested in the technicalities involved in producing the show, you are invited to remain at the end of the performance and take part in a seminar session with the three talented people who created "EMBRYO"—Kenneth Muscutt, lecturer in dramatic art and expert in the field of polarized light; Eric Regener, Director of University of California Santa Cruz's electronic music studio and teacher of music composition. (Eric operates the Moog Synthesizer during the show—you can see it close-up during the seminar) and Ruth Solomon, solo dancer of the Jean Erdman Dance Theatre, and member of the University of California Santa Cruz dance faculty—possibly the only ballerina to have been seduced by a grand piano—as you will see during the "EMBRYO" performance.

You have not lived until you have seen "EMBRYO." Tickets are on sale now at Sunset with special student and military rates.

PARTY PLANS . . .

BY PHYLLIS JERVEY

Cosmopolitan Carmel exemplifies the way European hostesses have adopted American short cuts with finesse. So many of us who had cooks and other domestics during tours of duty in tropical and off-the-beaten path places, now turn to American simplified methods in the kitchen.

Outstanding is Malu Jacobs, French born, reared in a North of France Sacre Coeur convent, who now lives on Camino Real with her American husband and young daughter.

One of the most memorable luncheons we have enjoyed, here or abroad, is the exquisite one Malu gave this week. Seemingly effortless on her part was the très élégant déjeuner. A beautifully appointed table with fresh flowers, transparently delicate lace-edged place mats, matching serviettes, heirloom silver were the subtle background for Malu's collection of Imari Japanese plates. In France these are called "des assiettes du Compagnie des Indes": (dishes from the East India Company). Each has a different design with colors that blend: red, blue, hand gold-dusted rims. Eye appeal was not only a table, but on pale cream-colored walls with the famed French artist Charles Vernet's first edition of horses, known as "aquarelles", also Malu's favorite etchings of ships.

Appetite appeal greeted us warmly with a hospitable fireplace to thaw us first, aperitifs ... vermouth, Dubonnet, sherry. Next came miniature rolls. On these open-faced, truly tiny bite-sized foundations were a choice of French roquefort mixed with sweet butter; whipped sardines and minced pimient, pâté de foie gras, la lignée (figure conscious although we all hope to become).

In the dining room with glowing patina of antique mahogany, we appreciated the delicious aroma of crab tarts already placed as we sat and sipped white wine.

The next course was a fabulously tender Chateaubriand: filet of triple A-1 steak. Accompanying was an olive wood bowl of mixed greens with the lightest of whispering oil-and-lemon juice dressing. Firm, but not hard, real petits pains, slightly sweet in comparison to sour dough ... no butter.

French burgundy complemented this discretely substantial staving-off starvation "production". Back to the fireplace, although we were feeling warm. Malu had planned to serve the aperitifs and bouchées on the beautifully manicured patio, dessert there also. Fog had set in, so we unashamedly devoured delectably fattening petits fours and mini eclairs with strong coffee and liqueurs.

Much laughter, gayety, reminiscences and how best to cope without servants. Do-it-yourself!

Malu's program depends on how much energy one has. Determination and a cheerful spirit count tremendously. How was all this accomplished? Malu, who insisted that she "couldn't boil an egg" before she came to Carmel, now is a cuisine convert, expertise culinary-wise in the most casual manner! Lucky us.

Quiche au Crabe (Crab Tarts)

To serve eight, in 2 chilled 9 inch pie shells, arrange this combination: Two cans top grade Alaska crab, or the equivalent in fresh, minus shell and gristle; mix with this 6 beaten newest of eggs, some butter, 2 cups half and half cream, nutmeg, dill, salt and pepper to taste. The crab should be left in fairly large pieces. Bake in 375 F. oven from 35 to 45 min. until custard browns. Cool at room temperature. Cut in wedges.

Chateaubriand

The first requirement here is to purchase only the ultimate in filet of beef. Six pounds for 8 hungry females ... more for men. Your meat man will cut this extravagantly succulent filet into a two inch morsel to feed the gods ... or goddesses. Malu marinates hers in olive oil, crumbled tarragon and a soupcon of crushed garlic for 3 hours. Drain, and at last minute briefly grill or broil so that the meat will be very rosy ... RARE ... Otherwise, this almost forgotten luxury (at least to Party Plans) will toughen. Do not wrap in foil or put onto electric server ... but bring fourth immediately. The delicate salad, consisting of fresher than fresh watercress, hearts of butter lettuce, endive from Eurpoe, goes right on the same plate. VOILA!

Malu lived in Madagascar, a large island in the Indian Ocean, for quite a few years where life was challenging. Servants were everywhere. We suspect it took Malu's firm hand to manage the large receptions and fetes to which this French-speaking island is accustomed.

Another specialty of our ingenious hostess is:

Canard aux Olives (Duckling with Olives)

Says Malu: Take a nice duckling. Stuff it with some pitted green olives. In a thick pan, brown it on all sides. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Cover and simmer on a low fire or bake at 350 F. Blanch (Meaning throw into boiling water) 3/4 lb. green, pimiento-stuffed olives, leave 5 minutes. Degrease the duck while cooking by using sharp fork prongs. Discard fat. Half an hour before duck is done, add blanched drained olives. Serve with brown rice and green beans, glamorized with sliced almonds, grated nutmeg, butter, tossed together.

Aubergines en Tranches (Scalloped Eggplant)

Butter a pottery, oven-proof casserole. Layer by layer place bread crumbs, sliced, peeled, eggplant, fresh sliced tomatoes, sliced onions, green pepper and garlic. Each layer is lightly touched with salt, freshly ground pepper, paprika, a splash of lemon or lime juice. Repeat layering until casserole top is reached. Cover with buttered bread or cracker crumbs. Bake 1 hour in 350 F. oven until golden brown. May be prepared the day before your husband telephones and politely informs you he is bringing in four associates straight off Air France, or what-have-you, for dinner. Oui, cheri?

'Young Adults for Action' program at Sunset

Seaside's Young Adults for Action will present an evening of free entertainment at Sunset Auditorium on Friday to introduce residents of Carmel and Carmel Valley to the organization's wide range of community activities.

Families are invited to attend the multi-media program, which will begin at 8 p.m. Live entertainment will be provided by the Afroettes drill team and the "Provisions." There will also be stereo recordings by Joan Baez and Mimi Fariña made especially for this program.

A three-screen movie will demonstrate the scope of YAFAs programs in the fields of health, recreation, poverty and crime prevention. Refreshments will be served after the show.

The evening of entertainment and information is being sponsored by the Monterey Peninsula Committee of 200, a group of concerned citizens who have supported the work of the American Friends Service Committee. Its primary purpose is to educate the community at large on the problems of Seaside and to work with YAFAs to solve those problems and to keep communications open between the black and white communities. The Committee of 200 is also working to raise funds for YAFAs activities that are not covered by other sources.

Dr. Albert Baez of Carmel Valley is chairman of the group. Persons interested in learning more about the committee, or YAFAs, may call Dorothy Durham at 659-2802.

Multi-media show tomorrow night:

Seaside community workers assail Carmel apathy

BY GARY FRANTZ

When the Young Adults for Action, the Seaside-based community development organization, were planning tomorrow's multimedia show at Sunset Auditorium, they ran into a sticky problem. Logically, the program should be held in Seaside, home of most of the performers and center of YAFAs activities. You throw a party in your home, not at a guest's, right?

Not in this case.

"The people we're trying to attract would never come to Seaside, especially at night," explains a YAFAs to no dinner. They're people literally starving to death over here."

Roy detects more of a sense of apathy than overt malice in the neglect.

"People don't seem to care," he says with an evenness that reveals neither surprise nor bitterness. "Check out the newspaper if you want to see how people on the Peninsula relate to Seaside. They're interested in the big scandal, the council. You've seen those little items inside: 17-year-old arrested for drugs, 12-year-old girl gets raped, 14-year-old boy shoots flaming the body politic.

"I think it's a shame people don't try to find out how their neighbor's living, instead of swallowing these phony images," he says. "This fear is irrational. I've lived here a long time and yet have never witnessed any incident where people have come into Seaside and been hurt."

George Solomon, YAFAs purposeful recreation director, also wonders about Seaside's notoriety.

"I can't say everyone has this distorted image," says Solomon. "The AFSC (American Friends Service Committee, whose Monterey affiliate, the Committee of 200, is sponsoring tomorrow's show) have worked very hard with us. They weren't afraid to come around. On the other hand, there were some young college students who came down here and it seemed like they had this stereotype built up, like they were going to be jumped or something."

Solomon adds a touch of pantomime to the story but it's hard to tell if he's amused.

Solomon views from another level the estrangement Jimmy Roy talks about. The organizer of the Peninsula's first free soapbox derby and Pop Warner football team, he believes sports to be a great equalizer.

"Sports teach a basic respect for one another," he says. "When kids play football there's no black, no white, just football."

The logical extension of this philosophy, Solomon another boy.

"Why do they do these things?" people ask. They have nothing else to do. Kids over in those rich communities have recreation, they own automobiles."

Ignorance fuels fears, according to Roy's analysis. He detects a tendency on the part of white Peninsula communities to judge Seaside by its most notorious "bad" section, "The Pit", a street gathering place noted for its casual disenchantment with social presumptuousness. Roy compares "The Pit" with a red flag in the hands of politicians intent on in-staff member. "They're afraid they'd never make it home."

This fear is typical of the relationship between the two communities, YAFAs staffers assert.

"There's a lot of talk about brotherly love and all this crap," states Jimmy Roy, YAFAs scholarly looking program administrator. "Yet those who propagate this type of talk, they're not practicing it. When we go to Carmel we're like a foreigner in another country."

Roy, who is not the least embarrassed to admit that he went to prison four times before finding a vocation with YAFAs, laments the nearly impenetrable barrier between the Peninsula's poor and affluent communities.

"There are people who say, 'What a shame,' when they hear of discrimination on a national level, and who don't even know what's happening right next door," Roy asserts. "People on that side of the Peninsula never even come into Seaside. The closest they come is when they drive down Fremont to catch the freeway to San Francisco. What do they see? — gas stations and motels."

"They're not aware of the substandard housing, the broken-homes with four or five kids — the oldest seven years old — and the mother working. They can't imagine people being hungry, kids going to school daily with no breakfast and no money to buy lunch, who come home believes, is an inter-city league on the Peninsula, such as the one he attempted to organize during the recent basketball season. The effort met with partial organizational success — Pacific Grove and Monterey contributed teams — but Carmel went unrepresented.

SERENA JOHNSON rehearses her high school drill team, The Afroettes, in preparation for their performance tomorrow night at Sunset Auditorium. The multimedia show is sponsored by Young Adults for Action and the Committee of 200.

"They didn't want to participate," says Solomon. "They have such a close-knit thing over there with their own youth center. It seems like Seaside is blacklisted as far as trying to get together."

Is this the impression of the Seaside youth involved in the league?

"When you live in Seaside you tend to be hostile," says Solomon.

The need for greater communication is further stressed by James Golden whose nickname, "Bull", is an obvious reference to his massive shoulders.

"I owe it all to the Department of Corrections," Golden says with a smile. Part of his time in prison was spent with work gangs.

Golden works primarily with Soledad inmates from the Monterey Peninsula.

"We're trying to help them get out of the institution and of prison as fast as possible."

Contact between a convict and someone on the outside also helps clear the way for a man's reentry into society at large, says Golden.

"A man comes out of prison cold," he says, "tell him to function in this society but he has very few resources to do what they ask. We try to line up a job, arrange for a place to stay. A man has to have a chance."

Golden says the help given to the rehabilitation program by Peninsula citizens has been "very limited".

"What we need is community involvement to make this thing work," he says. "Even discussions would help but it seems people just turn off. Maybe it's guilt."

Lee Toler, YAFAs director, a perceptive man who has a knack for meeting people on their grounds, dispels the notion that there are no ties between Seaside and neighboring white communities.

"Go down to the bus stop some morning and watch the people getting off the bus. Black women in white dresses — that's the connection. Seaside is a cheap labor pool for Carmel's houses, hotels and motels."

Toler doesn't begrudge the jobs. There are few enough as it is, he says. But he does buck the idea that service work should be the special preserve of black people.

"Take a kid from a family where the father is a doctor or lawyer. He's going to go on. But you take a black kid, what does he have to look at?"

Toler, who worked as a school janitor before founding YAFAs, says the schools provide little impetus.

"There are teachers in Seaside who live in Carmel who've never been around blacks. How are they going into a productive life," he says.

"In Carmel they have everything they need. In Seaside, everybody needs something."

One way to do this is by developing lines of communication between the inmate and the outside world.

"This accomplishes several things," says Golden. "For one thing it lets an inmate know there's somebody out here who cares for him. This is a powerful incentive to get out to understand these kids? They might offer sympathy but we have to go beyond that. There has to be basic understanding. As long as we live here and they live there this problem's going to go on forever."

Heaven and hell. That's the way Toler describes the relationship of Carmel and Seaside.

JAMES GOLDEN, director of Young Adults for Action rehabilitation program, makes point during informal discussion with Soledad inmates, many of whom come from Seaside. Golden wants to develop more lines of communication between men in prison and the world outside.

"People on this side of the Peninsula never even come into Seaside. The closest they come is when they drive on Fremont to catch the freeway to San Francisco."

YAFA

"Over there they have everything they need," he says. "Here everybody needs something."

The distinction is illustrated with the directness of a cartoon on a recent, brilliant Friday morning. Toler and George Solomon, leaving a conference in Yafa's bare headquarters—a former police station—step out onto Palm Street. It's the sort of street on which trucking companies like to park rigs when their lots are full.

Toler and Solomon head toward the freeway in the organization's late-sixties Chevrolet, which has accumulated more than 80,000 miles in less than a year of missions. Still in Seaside,

Toler stops at a service station and asks for two bucks worth of gas. The attendant, sporting a thick, red mustache, responds with a brotherly, "right on."

"On right," Toler

"I think it's a shame people don't try to find out how their neighbor is living instead of swallowing these phony images."

responds, amused.

He chats with the man a minute while the pump is running.

"You can tell when someone is sincere," he says

later.

Coasting down Ocean Avenue into Carmel, a note heretofore absent enters Toler's snapshot commentary. Acridness.

"You don't call this heaven?" he asks as the car halts at the foot of the hill.

For some reason, the image of a stage set comes to mind. Perhaps it is the sunlight, the color it pumps into the park's green and yellow, the sharp relief it gives to well-tended buildings. Carmel is gorgeous. Young men throw Frisbees in the park. The avenue bustles with bright-skinned automobiles. Women wearing $300 worth of clothes parade miniature dogs past shop windows displaying rich pastries and ingeniously textured fabrics.

Toler is unimpressed. "A lot of these people are just living in a dream world," he says. "No wonder their kids don't dig them. They see that phoniness." He watches a young woman in golf clothes disembark from her car and walk toward a dress shop.

"Going to do a little looking," says Toler. "Where's that at?"

'A Better Chance' program at Carmel High?

10 ethnic minority students would be brought into community

BY PAT GRIFFITH

The Carmel school board was asked last night to endorse A Better Chance, a privately-funded program which hopes to enroll 10 minority students in Carmel High School next September.

Thomas M. Mikula, director of the ABC public school program with offices at Dartmouth College, attended the meeting to explain the program.

Mikula will make a similar presentation tonight in a special public meeting on ABC which will be held in Brey Hall, Carmel High School, starting at 8 p.m.

Basically Mikula hopes to get support for a plan to permit 10 talented but academically disadvantaged boys of minority races to attend Carmel High School under the auspices of ABC. At present there are only a handful of non-Caucasian students at the high school, including one black.

The boys, chosen from applications submitted from all over the country, would live together in an ABC dormitory-home. The resident director would be a Carmel High School teacher, who would live there full time with his wife and family.

The director would be assisted by two college tutors, most likely chosen from Stanford or U.C. Santa Cruz, who would work at Carmel High School as teacher aides at no cost to the school district. In the evenings they would provide three hours of intensive tutoring for the 10 resident ABC students.

If the Carmel program were to follow the pattern of ABC programs elsewhere, 10 students already attending Carmel High School would also be chosen for the ABC program. They would continue to live at home, but would go to the ABC residence five nights a week to study and work with the undergraduate tutors.

An ad hoc committee of interested Carmel and Carmel Valley residents, led by the Rev. David Hill of All Saints' Episcopal Church in Carmel, has been studying the national ABC program for two years.

According to attorney Mark Starr, who has worked with the group, the possibility of establishing an ABC program in Carmel suddenly became a possibility last month, when an ABC grant of $20,000 a year for two years became available.

On a national basis, there are 15 public schools participating in the ABC program, most of them located near colleges or universities in the East.

The first ABC public school program in California will start in Altadena in September. It is sponsored primarily by the Samuel Goldwyn Foundation, and will enroll ten boys from Watts.

If the Carmel school board gives its endorsement, the Carmel ABC program would start at the same time, making two in the West.

ABC BEGINNINGS

ABC was originally started by Dartmouth College and a group of eastern preparatory schools in 1963 to prepare promising ninth and tenth grade students of minority races for college and ultimate leadership roles in society.

Students from all over the United States were selected on the basis of academic and leadership potential. Coming from urban ghetto and farming communities, Indian reservations and Eskimo villages, they were taken out of home and community situations in which they had little chance to succeed and brought together in community-sponsored ABC residences.

Dartmouth College provided an introductory summer ABC experience that emphasized English and mathematics. Then the prep schools assumed the major responsibility for providing three to four years of college preparatory education.

In the summer of 1964, 55 boys came to Dartmouth. In succeeding summers, the program was expanded to other campuses: Mount Holyoke for girls, Carleton, Williams, Duke and Amherst. By 1969 over 1400 boys and girls had been placed in outstanding private preparatory schools.

Some have attended Robert Louis Stevenson School in Pebble Beach, where they have been assimilated into the regular dormitories on the campus rather than living together as a separate unit.

In 1966, the program was expanded to include public schools. The basic plan has been to gather together 10 to 12 ABC students in one residence in a community which generally does not have a minority population, but which does have an outstanding high school providing quality college-preparatory courses.

The first public schools ABC program started in Hanover, N.H., and included students from Alabama, Georgia, Illinois, New York, Pennsylvania and Virginia.

Through 1970, 184 students had been enrolled in various public school ABC programs. While many are still attending high school, 73 have graduated and all 73 have been accepted by colleges across the nation.

Dartmouth leads with 15 ABC students, followed by Tufts with five and Lawrence, Case Western, and Macalester with three each. ABC students have also been accepted at Stanford, Harvard, Columbia, Cornell, Colgate, Bowdoin, Amherst, Pomona, Syracuse, Northwestern, Mt. Holyoke, Swarthmore, Reed, Oberlin, Duke, Drake, Williams, Tuskegee, and the Universities of Arizona, Memphis, New Hampshire, New Mexico and Pennsylvania, among others.

FINANCING

During the initial years of operation, the cost of educating 10 disadvantaged youngsters and maintaining an ABC residence is approximately $30,000 per year, or $3,000 per student.

A community starting an ABC public schools program generally receives support for two-thirds of this cost, or $20,000, for the first two or three years. This money comes primarily from corporations, foundations and individuals.

In order to receive this outside help, a community must first raise the remaining one-third, or about $10,000. This is generally a combination of cash and in-kind contributions.

In the case of Carmel, Starr said, the ad hoc ABC committee will probably need to raise about $4000 in cash. In most eastern school districts, he said, there is a tuition charge, averaging about $600 a year, for students attending a public high school whose families do not live in the area.

This would not be the case in Carmel, Starr said, but the school board does need to approve the expense in terms of instruction, supplies and transportation required for the 10 additional students.

He said he felt this would probably be offset by the advantage of having two highly-motivated teacher aides at the high school who would be paid for by ABC, not Carmel area taxpayers.

In addition to supplying funds for the school year, ABC also provides approximately $1,000 per student for the special summer introduction programs, which help bridge the gap between home and the new college-oriented community.

The first director of the ABC public schools program, James Simmons, is now Assistant to the President at Stanford. Starr said that if enough ABC programs get underway on the West Coast, Stanford has indicated its interest in providing a six-weeks orientation session similar to the ones now given in the East.

CARMEL PROGRAM

If there is a Carmel ABC program, the first 10 students will all be boys, primarily to simplify living arrangements. However, both boys and girls at Carmel High School would be eligible to apply for the local ABC program of special tutoring.

All applications for resident students go first to the ABC office at Dartmouth College. After initial screening, a certain number would be forwarded to the Carmel ABC committee, which would make the final selection of students who would come here.

Carmel's ABC students would receive their summer introductory work at Carleton College in Minnesota. Most, or possibly all, would be high school juniors or seniors.

Starr said that the committee has talked with a Carmel high school teacher who is interested in serving as resident director, and that arrangements are underway for living accommodations. He said this information would be announced in the near future when plans are firm.

Although students would live in the ABC residence all week, on weekends they would be able to visit with families in Carmel and Carmel Valley.

According to the ABC booklet which will be available at tomorrow night's meeting, "After a long week of activity centered around the ABC residence, Sunday afternoon with his host family can provide a welcome change of scene for an ABC student. The host family does not go out of its way to entertain its guest, but rather allows the ABC student to enter into family activities to whatever extent he wishes."

"Some ABC students look forward to an afternoon of touch football; many are interested in discussing newly developed ideas with a typical white family; others are anxious to be alone to reflect on the events of the previous week, and the weeks to come."

"Through this exposure, differences no longer remain barriers, but instead are understood and enjoyed. As one high school principal observed—'A great many curiosities and possibly a great many prejudices that might have been held before have now been dispelled.'"

Working with the Rev. Hill and Starr on the initial stages of the local ABC effort have been the Rev. James Brock, rector of St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church; George Schroeder, Perry Miller, Dr. John Baldwin, Lou Gardner, Conrad Olson, John Graham, Mrs. Ralph Thompson, Phyllis Bennett and a high school student representative, Glen Harnish.

Starr said the group would welcome more interested persons before a final board of directors is selected.

"We need more people to assist us," he said. "This will be an on-going program that will need support from the entire community if it is to succeed and be of mutual benefit, to the students who come here and to those of us who live here."

Through 1970, the ABC enrollment in public schools had this racial distribution: 184 Negro, 25 white, 63 American Indian, 28 Puerto Rican, and 9 Mexican American, for a total of 309 students entering the program.

Starr said he would assume that the Carmel ABC program would involve a racial mixture, probably including at least one Eskimo.

GORDON W. LUNDEEN of Carmel is pictured with his wife, Lois, during a four-day conference in the Bahamas last week with officers and field representatives of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. Last year, Lundeen, a member of the company's Monterey office, placed more than $1.2 million in individual life insurance, ranking him among the leaders of Met Life's 30,000 field representatives in the U.S. and Canada. The Lundeens live on Spindrift Rd.

Audubon Society plans two field trips

The Monterey Peninsula Audubon Society will have a field trip to Hastings Natural History Reservation in Carmel Valley on Saturday. Dr. John Davis, reservation director, will lead the trip. The reservation is an old ranch, now owned by the University of California, that is being allowed to return to the wild state. It is a good location for seeing many low-mountain birds.

The group will meet at 9 a.m. at the reservation headquarters, 14½ miles beyond Carmel Valley Village on the north side of the Carmel Valley-

Greenfield Road.

There are picnic tables available for those who want to bring lunch.

William Reese, president of the local chapter of the Audubon Society, will lead a beginners' instructional birdwatching trip to Chew's Ridge on Saturday, May 22.

Beginners' trips are designed to teach inexperienced birdwatchers to identify birds in the field. Non-members, welcome to all Audubon Society activities, are especially invited on these trips.

The group will meet at 9 a.m. near the United

Plans completed for Camp Amigos in Valley

Applications for Camp Amigos are now available in the offices at River and Woods schools.

The non-demonstrational, integrated day camp will open its third summer season on July 12 on the grounds of the All Saints' Day School in Carmel Valley.

Sixty children, representing a racial and economic balance, will be able to attend one of three day camp sessions.

Session No. 1 for children seven to nine years old, will be held July 12-16. Session No. 2 from July 19-23, will be for children 8 to 10 years old. Session No. 3, July 26-29, will be for nine to eleven year olds.

There will also be a week of overnight camping for children 10 to 12 years old in Big Sur from Aug. 9 to 13. Last year's Big Sur campers will be invited to attend a special reunion camp the first week of August.

The camp is under the direction of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Albert of Monterey, who are assisted by a group of high school counselors. The camp program consists of crafts, sports, music, hikes and daily outings to the beach, the Carmel Valley community pool or other points of interest.

The camp fee is only $1 a week for the day camp, or $2 for the week at Big Sur, in order to make the program available to children of all economic backgrounds. However, parents who are able to pay more may make a voluntary contribution to supplement funds received from churches, civic organizations and interested individuals throughout the Monterey Peninsula.

All children accepted for Camp Amigos will be asked to attend a free medical clinic at Highland School in Seaside on Saturday, June 5, at 9 a.m. Campers unable to attend this clinic will be required to have a health form signed by their family physician.

Applications should be mailed before May 29. Those received later will be put on a waiting list. For additional information, parents may call Gloria Stewart at 624-5845.

California Bank at the Carmel Rancho Shopping Center to form carpools. Participants should bring lunch.

Non-members are welcome to all activities of the local chapter.

Huber paintings, Calder glass sculpture in Seaside

Bernice Huber, who teaches drawing and watercolor in the Carmel adult education program at Sunset Center has a one-man show of oils and watercolors through May 28 at the Seaside City Hall Gallery.

Glass sculpture by John Calder and metal sculpture by James Eckhart will also be displayed. Calder has been blowing glass in Carmel since 1958. He lives at Fourth and Santa Fe.

Miss Huber, a 20-year resident of the Peninsula, received her art training at Chouinard Art Institute in Los Angeles and the University of Washington.

She is one of the owner-operators of the three-year-old Valley Hills Cooperative Gallery in Carmel Valley.

Also known for her stoneware pottery, Miss Huber has opened her Torres and First home in Carmel for three studio tours sponsored by the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art. On these occasions she demonstrated on the potters' wheel.

Calder began glass blowing at the age of 16 as an apprentice under a Swedish craftsman at the Henry Ford Museum and Greenfield Village in Dearborn, Mich.

Following military service, he began teaching at Monterey High School.

Calder considers his craft a "job he enjoys" rather than a hobby. His work has been sold at shops around the country.

Currently he is working on sculptures of 210 girl golfers for the Castlewood Country Club Womens Invitational Golf Tournament.

Eckhart began metal sculpting two years ago after being inspired by sculptures in a gift shop.

His work features comic figures, abstractions and large, detailed pieces.

Seaside City Hall is open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m.-5 p.m.

BRUCE BENZLER and guide dog will be guests at the Carmel Woman's Club's meeting May 24. Benzler is a member of the training staff at Guide Dogs for the Blind, Inc., at San Rafael.

Woman's Club to hear talk on guide dogs

Guide dogs for the blind will be the subject of the final program of the club year at Carmel Woman's Club on May 24, at 2 p.m.

Mrs. Pierpont M. Hamilton, president for the tenth year of the board of directors of Guide Dogs for the Blind, Inc., will be the speaker. She will be introduced by Mrs. Van Court Warren of Pebble Beach, chairman of the Peninsula committee for the organization.

This organization was founded in 1942 as a non-profit service to blind veterans and has grown into a national organization with volunteer committees in many states.

At the national headquarters in San Rafael, a qualified blind man or woman and a dog live together for the period of training after which the dog is given to an individual as a guide dog.

Mrs. Hamilton is the wife of Congressional Medal of Honor winner General Pierpont Morgan Hamilton and makes her home in Santa Barbara. Her years of work with the blind and her love of animals brought her to Guide Dogs for the Blind. She trained under blindfold with a class of blind students in order to understand the problems of the blind better, and also to appreciate the skill and compassion required of the instructors.

Mrs. Hamilton states that she is especially pleased with the work of the 4-H Guide Dog puppy raisers, whom she says are among the finest youth today.

In addition to her extensive work in the United States, Mrs. Hamilton has also visited guide dog schools in England, Italy, Austria, Finland and Holland.

Also here for the day will be Bruce Benzler, instructor at San Rafael. He will bring one of the guide dogs and will demonstrate training.

Special guests will be Eben Whittlesey of Carmel with his guide dog, "Bonnie;" Mr. Henri Ledeboer of Pacific Grove with "Lotus;" and Mrs. Van Court Warren's Peninsula committee for Guide Dogs for the Blind.

A tea and reception will follow the program. Pouring will be Mmes. I. Norman Downer, Virginia MacPherson, John M. Manczkowski, Joseph R. Reeves. Hostesses will be Mmes. A. Jordan Burns, Willard Ladd, Willis A. Potter, Fred J. Reynolds, Ashley Shaw, W.B. Skowran, Misses Eva Dunbar, Florence L. Harper, Marion W. Stevens.

This program is open to the public.

During UCB's Interest-Free Loan Sweepstakes.
To be eligible, all you have to do is fill out an entry blank at any one of our 235 offices. It's that simple — no purchase required. If you apply for a personal loan for any amount up to $10,000 and it's approved, you may win that loan interest-free. Or, if you really don't need a loan right now, you may win a cash prize equivalent to the interest on an average UCB Personal Loan with a two-year maturity. And, since there'll be one winner for every 50 personal loans approved for 3 months, there's no limit on how many people can win.

Of course, you're probably saying to yourself,
"How can I apply for a loan now? With money so tight, I'd do better to wait for the economy to pick up." Well, we'd like to point out that, strange as it probably seems, just the opposite is true. Interest rates are now lower than they've been in years.
While prices continue to rise. Which means that, if you borrow now, you'll actually save money in the long run.

So if you've been waiting to apply for a loan, you'd be wise not to wait any longer. Come in and talk to us today. No matter what you're in the market for — a new car, a boat, you name it — you'll find we've got a loan to suit your needs. Everything from a vacation loan that lets you wait 3 months to start repaying to a property improvement loan that finances 100% of your expense and lets you take up to 10 years to repay.

In fact, now that you know all the facts, there really is no time like the present to borrow, is there?
Because even if you don't win our sweepstakes, you don't lose.

By JUDITH A. EISNER

A companion to the old saying that "boys will be boys" is one that proclaims that "puppies will chew." Although puppies "will do" a lot of other things that fray human tempers, chewing up household articles is one of the most annoying problems of puppy-owning as well as being one of the most costly.

Unfortunately, chewing is completely natural behavior for dogs. We say unfortunately because keeping a puppy from chewing goes against the canine grain. Dogs use their mouths for eating, fighting and playing—and when dogs play, either with each other or with toys, they chew.

It is not possible to completely stop a dog from chewing.
short of muzzling him, which is cruel and impractical. The best the dog owner can hope to do is channel the chewing instinct, understand the reasons for it, and provide acceptable outlets for it.

As with any habit, it is easier to prevent than to stop undesirable chewing. Chewing can be ranked with thumb-sucking in children and cigarette smoking in adults as a habit that fulfills some need.

Puppies chew things for three reasons: they are bored,
they are teething, or they are attempting to play.

The normal, frisky puppy will, upon entering a room, attempt to chew on the rug, furniture legs, any loose object within reach and on your shoelaces. He does this chewing happily, with a wagging tail, trying to lure you into playing with him.

Most puppies respond to a verbal "No!" that is delivered sternly, in a no-nonsense voice. By ordering the puppy to desist as he playfully samples everything within reach, you can do much to lay the foundation for accepted and taboo chewing.

You can feed your new puppy out of an old pie tin; he can sleep on an old towel in a cardboard carton; but he must be provided with appropriate toys to play with and chew to his heart's delight.

Appropriate toys for a two-to-six month old puppy include a steady supply of dry rawhide "chews," a hard rubber ball, a natural raw marrow bone, and several good-quality rubber squeak toys.

Like children, puppies easily become bored. They will abandon one toy and, if another is not within reach, set to on the dining room table leg.

Present the toys to the puppy. You don't have to dump a carton of them in front of him, but give him a fair sampling—say a rawhide toy, a ball and a rubber squeak toy.

Make sure the toys remain available. Puppies "lose" toys as easily as children and they are apt to "disappear" under bushes in the yard and sofas in the living room. Wash them if they become soiled.

Do not give your puppy old shoes or gloves to chew on. It's been said a thousand times, but it bears repeating: dogs cannot distinguish between an old, cast-off shoe and a $35 pair of Dad's best English oxfords. The same holds true for leather gloves; a glove smells and looks like any other glove to a puppy. New or old is an irrelevancy.

When your puppy is well supplied with toys, it's your job to make sure he chews on them and not on "taboo" objects.
Whenever the puppy nibbles on something off limits, correct him firmly, rapping him on the muzzle if he doesn't stop.
Give him one or two toys and he'll probably settle down with them.

Chewing because of boredom usually comes with a young puppy (or a grown dog) being left alone at home for long periods of time. In the adult dog, such chewing is often deliberate spitework, and the dog is quite willing to accept the punishment such desecration brings. He's telling you something; you just aren't listening.

The best way to prevent puppy-boredom destruction is to confine the puppy when you are absent. If the weather is good and you have a securely fenced yard, put him out with some toys and a dish of water.

If he must be kept indoors, use either a bathroom, laundry room, garage or kitchen with a baby gate across the entrance. The important thing is to confine him where he cannot damage floors, draperies or furnishings. Let him try to chew on the edge of the washing machine—he might!

If you confine him in a bathroom, remove towels, bath mats and other "goodies" which, otherwise, will be systematically shredded.

Better still, as we have recommended before, invest in a regular dog crate when you first get a puppy and teach the dog to accept confinement in that unchewable crate during your absences and at such times when his presence at large may be undesirable.

During the teething stage between four and eight months of age, it's more essential than ever before to keep an eye on the dog and provide him with many things to chew.

Because his gums are tingling and sore, he must chew;
there's no getting around it. But to be forewarned is to be forearmed, so expect the inevitable teething period.

Most dogs outgrow serious chewing as they mature. They simply lose interest in this pastime as babies lost interest in their thumbs.

Once you are certain your dog is becoming trustworthy, permit him more time alone in rooms full of toothsome objects. If he behaves himself, trust him a bit further. Someday he may surprise you and become an unchewing housedog.

175 turn out at Brey Hall:

Public meeting spurs OLAF drive

The Odello Land Acquisition Fund (OLAF) appeared to gain more momentum Tuesday night as some 150 to 175 persons gathered at Carmel High School's Brey Hall to pledge their support and some of their dollars to the cause of preserving the 292-acre artichoke ranch at the mouth of the Carmel Valley as open space.

City Reconstruction Corporation of Los Angeles has an option to purchase the land to develop high-density housing and hotel facilities. OLAF has set a goal of $1 million towards purchase of the land.

Among developments at the meeting:

—It was announced that funds from the $2.4 million bond issue passed last year for the construction of a Carmel Sanitary District secondary treatment plant might be used towards purchase of Odello land adjacent to the plant.

—OLAF committee chairmen were announced and following the meeting many members of the audience volunteered their services to the committee.

—Lawyer Francis (Skip) Lloyd read a letter from CRC in which the corporation asks OLAF's support in gaining special treatment density zoning on the Odello land from the County Planning Commission.

—OLAF Chairman Fred Farr of Carmel, a former state senator, announced that OLAF so far has acquired $70,000 in actual funds or pledges.

To put the audience, as Farr said, "...in the right frame of mind," the meeting began with a showing of color slides, accompanied by the classical guitar of Peter Evans, of the artichoke fields and environs. The last few slides, however, which gained a considerable reaction from the audience, were air shots of massive and sprawling tracts and housing developments.

Farr told the audience that OLAF is "concerned solely with the acquisition of this land, at fair market value for public preservation."

While stating of the proposed development, "One can't say the plan is unattractive," Farr added, "By and large the new developments in California do not pay their own way" with increased burdens on taxpayers of school and protection taxes.

If the land is not preserved, he said, it would "be a great mistake that we would regret in the future."

Methods through which the land could be obtained, Farr said, were (1) contributions by the public, (2) the possibility of the City of Carmel purchasing part of the land through its greenbelt funds, (3) the sanitary district purchasing some of the land for the disposal of tertiary treated effluent. He said OLAF, which has already asked the support of United States Senators John Tunney and Alan Cranston, is also hoping for matching funds from the U.S. Department of Housing and Development (HUD) and the U.S. Department of Interior's Land and Water Conservation Fund.

Admiral C.W. Fisher, president of the Carmel Citizens Committee, an organization which, Fisher said, has been endeavoring to preserve Carmel and environs for the past 10 years and "is battling a little over 51 percent," pledged the committee's support and cooperation to the OLAF fund drive.

He said the proposed ching out every possible way to purchase these lands," and to show its support, he said, the committee was pledging $500, half of its assets.

"I hope each and every one of you will realize" the importance of saving the land and contribute," he said.

"How bad do we want it? I say we want it from the bottoms of our hearts, so let's give."

It was Fisher who wrote Assemblyman Bob Wood of Greenfield, asking him to seek an opinion of bonds to obtain funds to acquire agricultural land adjacent to a sanitary district plant to be used for purposes of sewage disposal treatment or collection."

After the meeting, Fisher pointed out that because of recent federal and state grants the district would not need the full $2.4 million bond issue funds to finance the construction of the new plant.

However, Lloyd was a little bit suspicious of the phrase in Murphy's statement, "approved by the raise the maximum amount of funds and "go with them and say, 'Here it is. Now produce.' Until then," he said, "there was not much chance of striking a bargain."

Lloyd said that the previous understanding with the corporation was that CRC would pull out if the Odellos received a reasonable price for their property and if CRC received its costs to date which are, Lloyd said, estimated at from $50,000 to $100,000. The CRC letter will be sent to the planning contributions made on a monthly basis.

Weston got a laugh when he said, "We are conditioned to pay this way. I am terrified when I have to pay for something in a lump sum. We are absolutely conditioned to pay by the month."

To a question from the audience as to what would happen to such open space areas as the Fish and Oppenheimer ranches if the Odello property is developed as planned, Weston said he thought they would probably go the way of the Odello lands.

Besides Weston, other committee chairmen appointed were: Bill Pentony, youth committee; Barbara Rainer, women's activities committee; Claire Franklin, speakers' committee; Robert R. Robertson, public relations committee; Erven Torrell, innkeepers' committee; Don Scanlon and Bruce Meyer, co-chairmen, medical committee; Howard Brunn, businessmen's committee.

Jim Root, OLAF's executive director, said he also hoped to form teachers' and military personnel committees, and would soon announce their chairmen.

At the end of the meeting the committee chairmen stood and people interested in working met with them. The committees adjourned separately.

By the way, OLAF is going the bumper sticker route.

The stickers, which cost 50 cents, the funds of which will go to cover OLAF administrative costs, state simply, "Give OLAF Now."

The "A" in "OLAF" is a green pine tree.

Text of letter from developer to OLAF

The following is the text of a letter from Donald G. Whiteman, president of City Reconstruction Corp., to "Skip" Lloyd, in response to Lloyd's letter requesting word from the developer on the price and terms for purchase of the Odello ranch.

Only minor deletions in the text were made, none of which change or obscure the meaning. The edited portions make reference to specific matters explored privately by CRC and the OLAF group.

The entire text of the letter was read at Tuesday night's meeting at Carmel High School.

Mr. Francis P. Lloyd
Carmel, California 93921

Dear Mr. Lloyd:

I have discussed...your letter of April 30, 1971, and we do not believe that it accurately states the conclusions of our discussions with you. Our understanding of the discussions is as follows:

1. That our company and the Odellos would be willing to establish a firm price in the event OLAF was able to raise adequate money to purchase the property...We did indicate, however, that the Odellos and ourselves would be willing to establish this price immediately if OLAF would assist the Odellos in expediting the processing of the present zoning application, with an understanding that the right of purchase, which is to be granted to OLAF, would be preserved, not withstanding said zoning, and that the price established would not be increased as a result of said zoning being approved. It is our understanding that you and Mr. Farr refused our offer.

2. Certain members of your committee, including Mr. Farr, desire to continue their efforts to oppose and delay the Odello zoning application. Mr. Farr spent a considerable portion of the meeting exploring various areas of opposition not in any way related to OLAF. We understood that you could not control, and would not attempt to control, the action of various members of OLAF with respect to the zoning application.

Under these circumstances...neither ourselves nor the development is "the most serious" threat that Carmel and this part of the county has ever faced.

"The overwhelming majority of citizens and residents of the area," he said, "have stated explicitly and with force 'that this type of development is not what the area wants.'"

He said that the past has shown that developments such as the one proposed, in the long run cost the taxpayers more than if they themselves had purchased the land.

"Finally, the proposal is bad for the county and bad for Carmel," he said.

While lauding the Odellos, Fisher said the developers had not "yet shown that his scheme" is of any particular value to the county, the city or the people."

Fisher, who advocated the changing of zoning laws, said that the citizens committee supports OLAF "in sear-

Legislative Counsel George H. Murphy as to whether or not sanitary district bond issue funds could go towards the purchase of the artichoke fields.

Murphy's opinion was telephoned to OLAF Tuesday and announced for the first time at the meeting. It reads in part:

"While the terms of voter approval restricts the purposes to which the proceeds of the bond issue may be expended to those purposes authorized by the voters, we think the language of the measure as quoted in the question herein is clearly broad enough to encompass the expenditure of funds for the acquisition of real property for the purpose of sewage disposal, treatment or collection."

Thus the measure quoted above would, if approved by the voters authorize the Carmel Sanitary District to issue 'general obligation'

Odellos saw any basis of cooperation between our groups, except to the extent set forth in our communication to the County Planning Commission.

3. During our discussions, we clearly indicated to you that we felt that the goal of the purchase of the Odello property by OLAF was a legitimate community goal, and that our company would not interfere with your project, provided that the money could be timely raised and our project not unduly delayed. In turn, if your group is acting in good faith, we believe that it is incumbent upon them to affirmatively indicate their concurrence that the Odellos have the right to zone and use their property as proposed in their zoning application. The Odellos believe this right was firmly established by the adoption of the 3-Ranches Plan.

If you are willing to indicate the good faith of your group and its members in the manner indicated, we will proceed to determine if arrangements...can be agreed upon. We are also not adverse to exploring any other methods of cooperation, but I am sure that you can appreciate that the Odellos do not desire to cooperate with you on one hand, and then to have members of your group with whom they are cooperating attacking and delaying their project.

We would suggest that, as a means to at least explore evidence of possible further cooperation, you furnish to us and to the Odellos a copy of the articles of incorporation of your group, the names of the directors or members or governing body of your group, and the name, address and amount contributed by each donor to OLAF. We would also like to know the amount of funds deposited, the place of deposit, and, if funds have been subscribed, the conditions of any such subscription. We also need to be furnished a copy of the letter from the Internal Revenue Service indicating that your group is tax-exempt, and that donations to it are tax deductible.

You should understand that our company is not representing the Odellos, but...all communications regarding this matter should be directed to us, and that we would communicate with the Odellos. Of course, we have no objection to your communicating directly with the Odellos and their attorney, but we believe the means suggested will provide the best method of communication between our respective groups...

Please let me know your intentions.

Sincerely,
DONALD G. WHITEMAN

voters." He said it appeared that Murphy meant the bond issue already approved by the voters, but conceded that there is the chance Murphy meant the voters would again have to go to the polls to decide if any part of the bond issue could be used for land acquisition.

Lloyd, who has corresponded with, and met with, Donald Whiteman, president of City Reconstruction, said he has told CRC repeatedly that OLAF had no intention of trying to "subvert" or "submarine" the Odellos' rezoning request to allow the development.

However, after receiving a letter from CRC Monday in which the corporation agrees to establish a purchasing price if OLAF will aid in establishing the rezoning of the property, Lloyd said, "The negotiations at this point are sort of fruitless."

He said the only way to bargain successfully is to commission, which will hold a public hearing on the rezoning request on July 28.

Farr said people should not be discouraged by the amount of money which must be raised (Farr said the reported selling price is in the $3 million range.) "I think it is here," he said, "and I think we can get it. I think we must get it."

Cole Weston, chairman of the finance committee, told the audience, "You know the job we have to do, a tremendous job."

Stating that he thought people realized the importance of preserving the fields, Weston said, "the biggest problem we have is to raise money."

He said that if 2,000 persons were to pledge $10 a month for a year, $240,000 would be raised.

Higher postage rates take effect Sunday:

Head of Carmel Post Office says new rates are bargain

Officer in Charge of the Carmel Post Office, Melvin Taylor, said Monday that increases in most postage rates will take effect Sunday as the new United States Postal Service begins its task of achieving self-sufficiency as required by the Postal Reorganization Act.

Taylor noted that general postage rates have not increased since 1967 when Congress passed what was to become its final legislative act in this respect.

Taylor explained that the new increases—authorized on a temporary basis until the newly created Postal Rate Commission can make recommendations to the Governors of the Postal Service on permanent changes—will raise first-class letter rates from six to eight cents an ounce, and airmail letter rates from ten to 11 cents an ounce. Post cards will go from five to six cents each and airmail post cards will go from eight to nine cents each.

The increases will be borne more by business than by individuals, the Officer in Charge pointed out, since about 75 percent of first class and airmail is from commercial mailers.

In addition to increases in first-class rates, second and third class will also go up on May 16. However, the full increases proposed by the Postal Service will not be put into effect on a temporary basis, in second and third class, since the postal reform legislation contemplates that such increases be phased over five years—or ten years for non-profit organizations—provided Congress appropriates the necessary funds to ease the transition to full rates.

Because of the phasing provision, the increases to become effective Sunday for second and third-class will generally be only one-fifth of the total increase which has been proposed by the Postal Service.

No changes are made in the rates for parcel post, which is the principal component of fourth-class mail. However, initial increases will be made in the "book rate" which is classified as fourth class.

The new temporary rates also make changes in other postage rate categories and special service fees, such as special delivery and registered mail.

Although postage for a first-class letter will increase to eight cents Taylor reminded local citizens that the new rate will still be cheaper than postage rates were almost 125 years ago.

According to Taylor the first general issuance of postage stamps by the Post

During this period, an average letter weighing one-half an ounce cost ten cents to be sent from New York City to San Francisco. In comparison, the imminent first-class postage increase from six to eight cents will still be 20 percent cheaper than before the Civil War.

"The comparison has more significance when consideration is given to the cost of living patterns, transportation modes, communications systems, and other factors which have changed during this 125-year period, Taylor said.

Vending machines here may be temporarily shut down

Vending machines in the Carmel post office are being adjusted to dispense the new stamps required under the new postal rate increase, Officer in Charge Mel Taylor said Monday.

The new rates have been placed in effect temporarily, pending completion of a permanent rate increase proposal being considered by the Postal Rate Commission. Temporary rate increases are authorized under the Postal Reorganization Act of 1970.

Taylor said the Postal Service intends to make the transition to the new rates in an orderly fashion, with a minimum of inconvenience to the public.

Under the new rate increase, the price of a first-class stamp will be eight cents. The air mail stamp goes to 11 cents. Thus, the six cent first-class and 10 cent air mail stamps will be discontinued.

In some areas, Taylor said, there will be no noticeable disruption in automated stamp dispensing services. In other areas, such as the Carmel office, units may be temporarily shut down while postal technicians make the necessary mechanical changes in the machines. Taylor said customers should go to window clerks for stamp purchases in those cases.

Self-service postal units will have available stamps of one, five, eight 11 and 25 cents. The five and 25-cent stamps are primarily to assist customers mailing parcel post through the parcel post acceptance feature of the units.

Taylor also pointed out other services provided by the self-service postal units. In addition to stamps, the units dispense $1 booklets of first-class and air mail stamps and packets of ten postal cards, ten eight-cent stamped envelopes and five air mail stamped envelopes. A minimum fee parcel insurance booklet also is available at 20 cents.

The Postal Service advised the public in February that it intended to make the temporary increases if the Postal Rate Commission did not make the recommended decision within 90 days of the request by the Postal Service.

Recently the Rate Commission confirmed that it will not be able to make a decision within the 90 days, and Sunday, May 16, was selected as the date on which the rates would become effective.

Office Department was authorized by Congress in March of 1847. He described the step as "one of the most important single improvements in the history of the American postal system."

The series consisted of a five-cent and a ten-cent denomination. At that time, the regular non-local postage rate was five cents a half ounce for mail traveling a distance under 300 miles and ten cents a half ounce if over 300 miles.

University for Man plans first summer session

The University for Man, the two-year-old "free university" which maintains headquarters at Monterey Peninsula College, is making plans for its first summer session.

Now in the formation stage are two seminars to be scheduled for the month of July, plus repeats of several of the UFM's most successful spring semester groups. Included will be a "summer sun fun" group dedicated to taking advantage of all the good summer things available on the Peninsula.

Persons with talents or abilities in various fields who will volunteer to "teach" classes or lead discussions are needed to round out the program. Those interested may telephone the UFM at 375-9821, Ext. 248 week days, or visit the headquarters in Room E-5A on the west side of the MPC campus.

NEW MEN IN TOWN

Two very small boys were added to Carmel's population the end of last month. David Michael arrived April 28 for Mr. and Mrs. David Lambert. The following day Mr. and Mrs. Paul Tocchet welcomed Sebastian Neetley.

District breaks ground for new plant

The Carmel Sanitary District this week held ground breaking ceremonies for its new secondary treatment plant and announced construction of the accompanying outfall line will begin as soon as an insurance policy is received from London.

The district's board, meeting Tuesday, also took steps to clarify funding of the project.

Work had already begun several days earlier on the $3.5 million plant when officials gathered Tuesday for ground-breaking ceremonies.

Board president, Harold C. Arnot, turned over the first shovel of earth watched by fellow board members Jim Pruitt and J. Wentworth Lewis. Also present were Hal Tennant and David Kennedy of Kennedy Engineers, the district's engineers; Max Drewien, district general manager; Shelburn Robison, district counsel and Cecil Murphree, superintendent for Stolte Construction Company, who is constructing the plant.

The announcement that outfall line construction will begin with the arrival of the insurance policy—expected any day—came at a meeting in which the board seemed to have satisfactorily disentangled itself from recent legal action attempting to block the line.

James Morton, district counsel, took care to catalogue the death of a court action taken by Tom Hudson, concerning the outfall.

Hudson, who was recently given 20 days to bolster a temporary restraining order against the line, had taken no action when the time period expired early this week.

Hudson, who was at the meeting, promised further suits unless the board desists with the line.

By officially recording the death of Hudson's recent actions, the board apparently felt the way was being cleared for additional bond sales to finance construction of the new facilities.

"They'll know now that the litigation is ended," said board member Pruitt.

The board took care, also, to separate money from sale of bonds in 1970 from financing of the outfall line. According to Pruitt, the board was acting on statements made at the time the bonds were sold in 1970, that they would be used only to finance the plant, and that the outfall would be a separate item.

After the board recessed Tuesday, they listened to a presentation by Robert J. Wooten, president of International Nutronics, Inc., of Los Altos. Wooten wants the board to use cobalt radiation to purify the sewage.

The board instructed Wooten to explain the process to Kennedy Engineers for a presentation at the next meeting, May 25.

the mayor's report

By BARNEY LAIOLO

BUDGET TIME—that time of the year when we all scratch our heads and try to figure out where we can control costs—or not let our hopes get away from us. It is this time of the year when I take inventory of our various city departments and their accomplishments. I would like to give you a brief outline of what I see this year.

To begin with, I see a cleaner, crispier and healthier Carmel. Credit for this goes to our "Street Department" and our "City Forester." You have possibly noticed the trim look on many of our trees and the fresh colorful feeling in the park and the center islands down Ocean Ave, the crisp look at Sunset and also City Hall. I'd like to mention also that the rhododendron and other colorful plants were presented to the City by the Carmel Business Association. Many thanks to this fine group.

Our Police Department continues to do its fine work of maintaining law and order throughout our town and with their new vehicles equipped with better equipment and more comfort the crime rate continues on a downward trend.

Our Fire Department continues to maintain their high degree of efficiency and keep on top of all calls both fire and ambulance, with great dispatch. Credit goes to the volunteers as well, as it is their loyal support that keeps the system working.

The Building Inspector's office keeps on working and their load has increased in many ways. They not only inspect new buildings under construction but also the many remodel and repair jobs done about town—but the parts you don't see are done inside. For example, they do plan checks, assist owners on interpreting rules and regulations both City and State. They also issue the "inspection reports" required under new ordinance which regard the sale of real estate. Another part of their work deals with the combined inspection of the Fire Department and code violations in the commercial district.

It would take much more space than allowed me to elaborate on the many improvements and additions that have occurred at Sunset Center. The amount of work and effort on the part of the Commissioners and the execution of this by our new Manager, Mr. Riley, is more than rewarding.

It has been my pleasure sitting in on the Library meetings and getting more informed on what really happens there. The monthly reports and the complete answers that are presented regarding this operation are a very excellent tool in helping to plan the future of this service to our City.

Within City Hall proper the Administrative staff is keeping up with daily problems and our Finance Officer has his nose to the grindstone, but definitely. You can't imagine the paper work and detailed reports that have to be processed in order to keep the records straight. In a few weeks we will be hard at it trying to put together a budget that will be one we can all live with and still fulfill most of the demands put on the City.

To close this letter to you I particularly want to thank Mr. and Mrs. Frank Riley, Mrs. Vicki Jones, and several Commissioners who take enough interest in our City and appear at all Council meetings, even though this is not a requirement of their job. I think it would be well to mention at this point and to thank the many "youths" who have taken the trouble to write me expressing their opinions on many city matters. This all makes for better government.

Until next week: Saludes!

Dr. Hall to attend national assembly

The Rev. Dr. George Hunter Hall, pastor of the Carmel Presbyterian Church, was elected by the Presbytery of San Jose as a commissioner to the 183rd General Assembly of the United Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A., meeting in Rochester, N.Y., May 17 through 26.

Over 800 commissioners, half laymen and half ministers, elected from 188 Presbyteries in the United States, will constitute the highest judicatory in the United Presbyterian Church.

At this assembly, the various boards, agencies, commissions and committees will make their reports and recommendations for prayerful consideration and appropriate action by the commissioners.

Of special interest and concern will be the plan of union of the Presbyterian Church in the U.S. (southern) with the United Presbyterian Church, U.S.A. (northern) as drafted by a joint committee of 24 representing both denominations. This plan will be considered by the general assembly which will probably recommend that it be sent down to the Presbyteries for study. Final action of the merger would then be taken by the 184th General Assembly in 1972.

Dr. and Mrs. Ken Romanoff to speak at Baptist Church

First Baptist Church, Carmel, will have as guests at the 6:00 p.m. service on Sunday, Dr. and Mrs. Ken Romanoff. Dr. Romanoff is a children's dentist, practicing in Fremont. He graduated from U.C. Berkeley, 1952. His wife comes from Grand Rapids, Mich. They met at Mount Hermon Christian Conference Grounds, and were married there five years ago this month.

Dr. and Mrs. Romanoff with their brother-in-law Alex Yefimov and 10-year-old son Sasha left to travel through Russia by Volkswagen camper last summer. However, upon arrival in Vienna they were frustrated by a five day waiting period at the Russian Embassy, thus necessitating a change in plans.

This led them to the most fantastic adventure through five Iron Curtain countries—Yugoslavia, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Poland and East Germany. Under most usual circumstances they met believers and observed how they worship and live. They were able to deliver Bibles into hands that would carry them into Russia, although they still hope that soon they will be able to do this themselves.

They will be sharing their experiences in the Iron Curtain countries and their meetings with the Body of Christ in Yugoslavia, Hungary and Poland. The

SAYERS

Charles Marshall Sayers, one of the early members of Carmel Craft Guild, died Tuesday in Alamo, Calif.

The funeral will be today at 2 p.m. in St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Walnut Creek.

Mr. Sayers was born in Kirkcudbright, Scotland, Dec. 21, 1892, the 10th of 13 children of a famous cabinet maker, and descendant of a long line of master craftsmen.

He began carving wood at the age of seven. At 14 he was instructing students and creating his own designs.

He enrolled in the Glasgow Royal Technical College at 17, specializing in furniture design and detail in which he won two awards. He also studied sculpture at the School of Art in Glasgow.

His career was interrupted by the outbreak of World War I. He enlisted with the first 100,000 and was sent to the Somme and later to the Balkans.

After the Armistice, Sayers returned to Kirkcudbright, disabled from shock and exposure in the Balkans. He gradually regained his facility in woodcarving. Craving wider opportunity, he came to the United States and discovered in Carmel an ideal place to work and live.

He had a flourishing workshop in Carmel with as many students as he could teach. His work has been widely exhibited throughout the United States.

Mr. Sayers moved to Alamo in 1945 at which time Mr. and Mrs. Julian von Meier bought his Carmel home.

She is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Ralph Johnston of Dayton.

Memorial contributions are suggested to Childrens Hospital Medical Center, Oakland.

Open Space District petition campaign starts

A petition campaign to create a Monterey Peninsula Regional Park and Open Space District got underway Monday night when a group of 40 interested persons met at Brey Hall, Carmel High School, to map plans for the campaign.

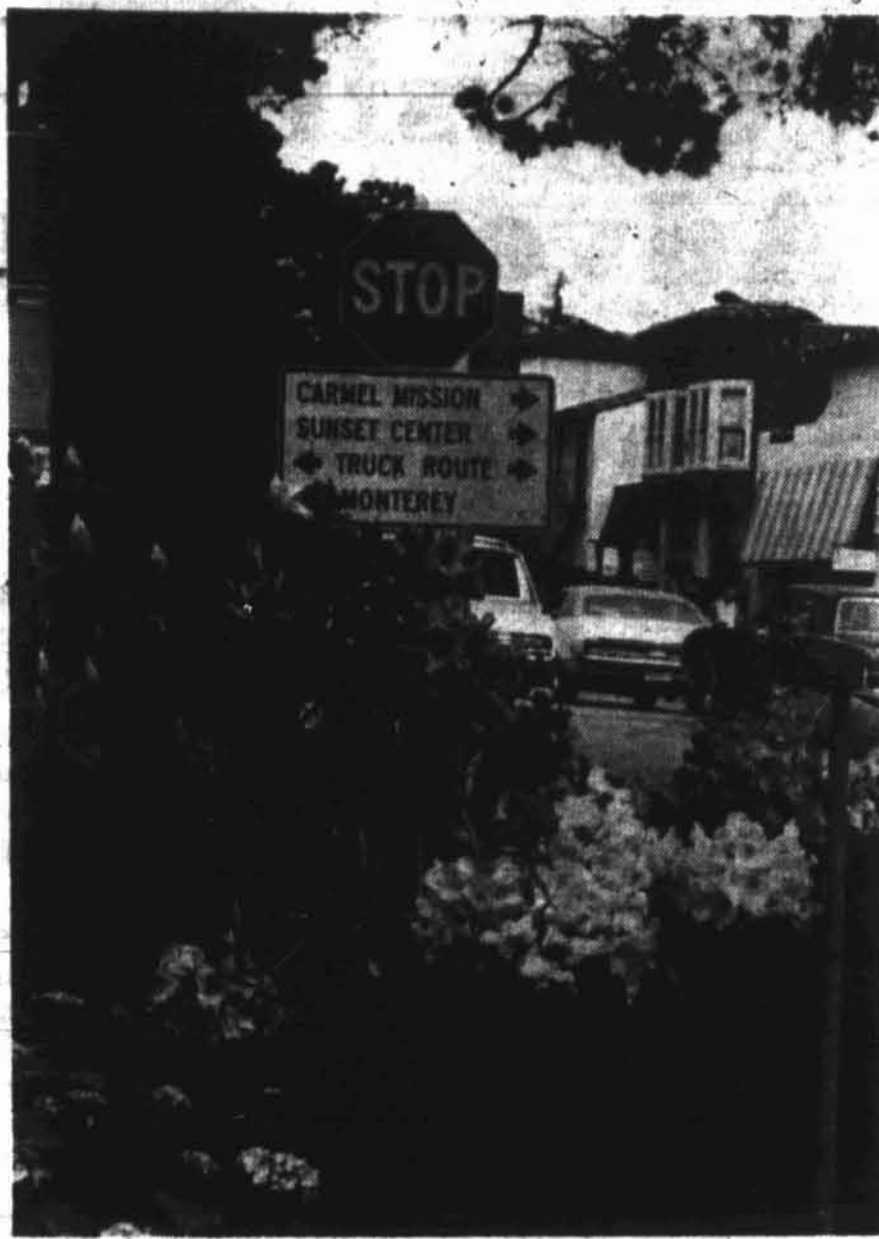

The group will seek 5,000 valid signatures for the creation of the district by mid-June in hopes of getting the issue on the ballot in time for the November general election.

Attorney Sean Flavin, chairman of the group, outlined the proposal and discussed the mechanics of securing petitions. Because many signatures later prove invalid, he said the group will seek 6,000 to 7,000 signatures.

The formation of the district would impose a 10 cents per $100 assessed valuation tax which, with present assessed valuation of property within the district, would raise approximately $270,000 a year for the acquisition of open space. This would mean a tax of $8 per year to the owner of a $30,000 home.

The district would follow the boundaries of the Monterey Peninsula College District, which covers the area from Marina on the north to a point below Anderson Landing on the coast south of Big Sur, and including most of the upper Carmel Valley.

Committees and sub-committees were set up at Monday's meeting and petition forms distributed.

NEW FLOWERING plants—including $300 worth of rhododendrons contributed by the Carmel Business Association—are being planted in the island beds on Ocean between Dolores and San Carlos. City Forester Robert Tate and a crew from the Public Works Department spent several days the past week planting the shrubs. (Photos by George T.C. Smith).

Letters

Dear Mr. Editor:

I live here and have for my whole life. I am scared. I am afraid of a great change like this Odello development. It would hurt me to see it because of what it would mean.

Only a few days ago I was driving the coast and noticed how beautiful it was and how special, for it is one of the few coastlines that is almost free from housing.

Carmel is such a unique place and such a lovely place that people could destroy it easily. The air is so clean and blue, the ocean so beautiful.

I am very concerned about this and wanted you to know. Thank you.

Dear Editor:

I received a copy of the 25 March 1971 issue of your paper which contains a write-up of the Public Meeting which the Corps of Engineers held at the Tularcitos School on March 19 relative to flood control studies for Carmel River. The account covers the main points of the meeting quite well and certainly reflects, in many respects, the desires of the people in the area regarding the flood problems and also the methods by which they should, or should not, be solved.

With respect to the quotation as contained in the article, there is an omission of a phrase which makes the statement not quite correct. What I did say in essence was that I had been with the Corps for 37 years, and I know of no case where we have been able to justify a single-purpose flood control dam in the San Francisco District. In other words, the statement applies only to the San Francisco District and not throughout the Corps. I bring this to your attention in order that there should be no misunderstanding of what was actually stated.

Sincerely yours,

A World of Your Own

This is what we offer you on a 165' lot in a quiet, forested area — and SO close in. The rhododendrons, azaleas and camellias are in glorious bloom and set off a most unusual timebered home.

Its 30' living room with oak plank floors opens from a gracious entry. Each of the 2 bedrooms has its own quality bath, and the kitchen has everything. And downstairs? Would you believe another bedroom — this one 30' with fireplace and bath? Or why not use it as a den?

The landscaping? Thomas Church did it and it's like a private park. $90,000 is the price and the value is much greater, but it CAN be yours for that!

Here's Your Chance!

To settle an estate you can enter your bid until the 18th (so hurry!) on a very attractive 2-bedroom, 2-bath home in quiet Carmel Woods. We think this is exceptional at $36,000 and will be glad to help you.

LINES FROM LOIS

Islands of Peace and Serenity

Perfection of planning and decorating, in an environment of aesthetic beauty and warm sunshine of Carmel Valley combine to make these two homes ideal for world-weary refugees from our hectic and troubled times. Even our associates, accustomed to seeing many lovely homes, were unusually impressed with these two and the word "perfection" was never used more sincerely in their praises.

1. $89,500

A gem of a house right on the 7th Green of the Carmel Valley Golf and Country Club. The handsome gate in the wall leads to the courtyard which is really an atrium surrounded by the three wings of the house itself. There are three bedrooms and a study (which could also be a bedroom, if you'd prefer). The master wing has its own fireplace with raised hearth, huge closets and a lovely dressing room and bath. A fireplace wall separates the living and dining rooms; the kitchen is sheer delight to the eye and sheer convenience to the cook. The easy maintenance landscaping features two decorative fountains. If you are unusually "particular" and hard to please, this is probably your new home.

2. $160,000

This is the total purchase price for a totally private world where originality and drama in the house itself are set off by fabulous mountain views beyond the swimming pool terrace. The 2320 sq. ft. in the residence contain 3 bedrooms and 3 baths, a 34-ft. living room, den, charming kitchen, all exquisitely decorated in antiqued white and shades of pale blues with interesting drapery and window treatments. The almost 800 sq. ft. of garage offer every convenience for the putterer and gardener, including work shop and even a tiny greenhouse, besides accommodation for 3 cars. The swimming pool terrace promises many wonderful parties or quiet family pleasures in a secluded setting with views out over the whole wide world. Only six miles out into the Valley sunshine and very convenient to shopping and the Carmel Valley golf courses. You owe it to your family to put this one on your list.

Last week we had a lot of houses under $50,000, and now we have only 4 of this group left: an adobe full of Old Carmel Charm and brand new kitchen and bath for only $39,500. Then, down a funny little road in the oaks just 4 blocks from town there's a very special, almost new 2 bedroom, 2 bath home for just $42,500. If you need a BIG house at a small price, for your family or for sharing as a weekender, don't miss our wonderful old confection at $48,000. Near the Forest Theater, built in 1965 but already completely at home in its forest setting (see George Robertson's photo above), a delightful rustic for only $45,000. and FLASH! We have just listed a charming home on a short, secluded street on Carmel Point for $58,000. If you've been "looking" in this choice area, you won't want to miss this.

Local Realtors observe National Realtor Week

"For Know-How in Real Estate - See Your Realtor" is the theme of the 1971 observance of Realtor Week, May 23-29, Mrs. George (Sallie) Conn, president of the Carmel Board of Realtors announced.

Members of the board join more than 94,000 Realtors across the nation to call public attention to their calling and the services they render.

A realtor is not just "any real estate man or woman,"

Mrs. Conn said. The term Realtor is an indicator of special qualifications because only a member of the National Association of Real Estate Boards and one of its more than 15,590 constituent boards can identify himself by that term. As such, he or she subscribes to a strict code of ethics and has access to board educational facilities at local, state and national level.

In a discussion of the code of ethics, Realtor Conn continued "that it was one of the first such codes adopted in the history of American business. Under its 30 articles, which cover all aspects of real estate

Two Carmel men renamed to head VFW unit

Robert C. Gilmour and Julien Caheen, both of Carmel, were returned to office for second terms as commander and senior vice-commander, respectively, at the regular monthly meeting of the Veterans of World War I, Monterey Barracks 634. Also returned were James Parr, second vice commander; Charles Saunders, adjutant; Gordon Downey, quartermaster; Ralph Cypher and James Hernandez, trustees.

"Buddies" who passed away during the past year were eulogized in a memorial service presided over by Maxine Hildebrandt, president of the organization's ladies auxiliary, and the commander.

Gilmour has served in World Wars I and II, in Korea and Vietnam.

Caheen was honored recently by being elected commander of the second district of the Veterans of World War I. The district is comprised of 28 barracks of World War I veterans.

The meeting concluded with the regular monthly luncheon prepared by the ladies of the auxiliary.

All World War I veterans are invited to attend meetings which are held at noon on the second Saturday of each month at the Monterey Neighborhood Center on Dickman and Lighthouse.

"The vets of World War I are fast fading into history," stated Commander Gilmour. "We stress that those who are eligible for membership join with us in perpetuating memories of that great conflict."
